It's economic war, says Iran

Bill Halkett photo

STEAMING IN to Yarrows shipyard on Monday, the ferry Queen of Prince Rupert began her refit today. She will also undergo conversion needed in order to take over the Seattle-Victoria run from the Princess Marguerite on May 12. She will later go into the Esquimalt Graving Dock in order to have holding tanks installed in compliance with new U.S. Coast Guard regulations.

Will cut oil to countries backing U.S. sanctions

Times News Services

TEHRAN — The Revolutionary Council announced today it will resist all pressure from the United States and called on Iranians to pull together in this "extraordinary, exceptional moment" in their history.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Iran faces a virtual economic war to assert its independence and Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar warned that the regime is prepared to cut oil shipments to any country which joins the U.S. in imposing economic sanctions.

Earlier, Moinfar said the council had reached a decision on the U.S moves Monday — which included a formal cutting of diplomatic ties with Iran and a trade embargo except for food and medicine — and would announce it later.

Diplomatic observers said the U.S. retaliatory steps were seen as a victory for the embassy militants and a setback for Bani-Sadr and other more moderate members of Iran's revolutionary council.

In Ottawa, an external affairs department spokesman said it will likely be several days before the Canadian government decides whether to impose economic sanctions against Iran.

The sanctions against Iran constitute "direct threats" to the Tehran government, the officials Soviet news agency Tass said today.

The worsening crisis between the U.S. and Iran contributed to a sharp rise in gold prices today, but the U.S. dollar again rose against all leading currencies.

The statements by Bani-Sadr and the council came at the end of an emergency council session called to deal with the U.S dispute and other problems.

The council statement said it welcomes the U.S. action, echoing Ayatollah Khomeini who said earlier the U.S. reprisals show the United States can no longer exercise control over Iran.

The council said Carter wants to use the hostage crisis as an excuse to stamp out the Iranian Islamic revolution.

Bani-Sadr said Iranians must realize Carter means business with his latest economic and diplomatic reprisals — "I tell the nation, it is a war."

He said Iranians have to work together and produce more to offset the U.S. measures.

Khomeini called on "noble Islamic nations" to kill such people as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. Sadat has cut diplomatic links with Iran and is harboring the deposed shah.

"This is the beginning of the dawn of final victory of a nation against the bloodthirsty superpower which was forced to cut relations," the ayatollah's statement said.

The Carter steps Monday followed Khomeini's decision to leave the U.S. hostages in the hands of the militant students.

A spokesman for the militants holding the hostages said the sanctions will not influence them. "It will strengthen our determination."

In London, officials of TWA and Pan Am refused today to allow Iranians aboard flights to the United States. The airlines said a provision of the U.S. Immigration Act calls for a $5,000 fine for every Iranian passenger they carry now that President Carter has imposed his strict sanctions on Iran.

The president instructed the Treasury Department

A lava-later percolator?

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — The water percolating in the crater atop Mount St. Helens may be controlling the volcano's behavior, say two geologists who got the first good look into the mouth of the volcano since it began belching gas and ash nearly two weeks ago.

Water from melting snow and ice runs into two ponds in the 518-metre-long crater, say James Moore and Peter Lipman of the U.S. Geological Survey.

They believe the water percolates down under the crater until it encounters magma-heated rock hot enough to flash it into steam, causing an eruption of mud and rock.

It rains back into the ponds, and the cycle starts over again in percolator fashion, the geologists said.

"We think the water, caused by melting of the ice and snow, is controlling the behavior of the volcano," said Moore of Menlo Park, Calif.

"The mountain seems to have settled into a steady state (of behavior)," he added, with eruptions caused by steam explosions about every half hour.

"As far as we can see, we expect it will continue to peak along as it has for the past few days."

Scientists flying over the volcano Monday said the massive crater on the summit had enlarged from about 460 metres long to about 520 metres long and 365 metres wide, said Jim Unterwegner of the U.S. Forest Service. At a news conference here, he said the crater appeared to be about 150 metres deep.

Meanwhile, avalanches of ice, snow and rock raked the north side of the mountain Monday, sliding down Ape and Goat canyons from large cracks across the peak.

The 2,950-metre peak that began erupting March 27 continued spewing small amounts of steam and ash and shaking with regular earthquakes. But there is still no evidence that an eruption of lava or pyroclastic material — a lethal combination of gas and debris — is imminent.

"Look at it this way, Paul ... so you lost a silver dollar... Now you're in the same league as Nelson Bunker Hunt!"

Speaker Harvey Schroeder was admitted to Chilliwack General Hospital Sunday after suffering what was described as a mild heart attack.

The 46-year-old Schroeder now is resting comfortably in the coronary care unit, a hospital spokesman said.

No additional details on his condition were released.

Schroeder's illness likely means that MLAs — just back from a four-day holiday weekend — can expect an even longer, unscheduled break later this month.

With Schroeder absent, Deputy Speaker Walter Davidson must take over, a move that will reduce the government's working majority to a bare three votes.

Premier Bill Bennett will be attending the Western Premiers Conference in Lethbridge, Alta., April 21-23.

At least one cabinet minister, possibly more, will be required to accompany him.

So rather than take the chance on losing a vote in the house during his absence, Bennett is expected to order a recess.

It is likely the break will be for a full week so the B.C. delegation will not have to rush back from Lethbridge for the Thursday afternoon and Friday morning sittings.

Social Credit Whip George Mussallem said today he can see no alternative to a recess during the conference unless the NDP agrees to pairing.

"If we don't arrange pairing, it will mean the house will have to be closed down. At least I will recommend that," he said.

But NDP Whip Frank Howard made clear there will be no pairing unless Bennett agrees to take NDP leader Dave Barrett to Lethbridge — a most unlikely move.

"The conduct of house business is in the government's hands," Howard said.

Howard also said he expects the house this week will confirm Davidson as Speaker, pro tem.

Apartment fire kills woman, 52

City police and firemen are investigating the death Monday night of a 52-year-old woman in a James Bay apartment fire.

Her name has not been released pending notification of next-of-kin.

Deputy fire chief Fred Severson said today the fire broke out in suite 233 of the Seaport Apartment, 200 Dallas.

Tenants detected smoke and turned in the alarm at 9:13 p.m.

Firemen discovered the woman's body on the floor of a small den in the suite and carried her outside. Efforts to revive her failed.

Severson said the fire, which was confined to the den, caused about $8,000 damage to the building and another $1,000 to contents.

The woman was alone in the suite.

Police said her husband, who was convalescing from a heart attack last fall, was in hospital for tests at the time.

Visit the stars

More than 3,500 entries have already been received in the annual Visit the Stars contest, sponsored by the Victoria Times and VI*90.

By the time the contest closes at 4 p.m. Friday it seems almost certain that last year's total of 5,000 will be surpassed.

Readers are invited to predict who will win the Academy Awards for best actor, actress and movie. The Oscar winners will be announced on Monday.

An official entry form, containing a list of rules and prizes, is on page 26 today.

Wednesday night is the latest any entries should be placed in the mail but if you want to be sure your entry makes it, mail tonight.

However, entries can be delivered by hand to VI*90, 817 Fort, at any time up to the deadline of 4 p.m. Friday.

There is a mail slot at the door, labelled Contest Mail, for the entries. The slot is in use 24 hours a day.

The grand prize of a trip for two to Hollywood, plus five runner-up awards, will be announced at a drawing from among the correct entries at 7 p.m. Wednesday, April 16, at the Odeon Theatre.

In the audience will be about 300 people who have won free admission as part of the Visit the Stars contest.

These passes have been awarded in a random draw from among people who have entered the contest. Winners of passes are all notified by mail. They will see the movie Little Miss Marker, a family comedy starring Walter Matthau, and Julie Andrews.

The theatre passes are an extra award. Pass winners remain eligible for the major prizes, if they have the correct answers. It is not necessary to be in attendance at the drawing to be eligible to win the major prizes.

ALBANY, Ga. (UPI) — Fire damaged an Albany furniture store late Monday night and authorities said a bird carrying a lighted cigarette to a nest in the store attic apparently was responsible. A passerby spotted the fire, which was quickly extinguished by firemen.

Toxic hemlock hunt mounted around city

Full-scale searches for a dangerous toxic hemlock plant reported to be growing freely in the Greater Victoria area will be conducted by Victoria and Saanich.

A five-year old girl who took a bite out of a hemlock plant growing in her backyard Saturday remained in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today.

Isabelle Yellowknee, of 21 Hayward Heights, was found unconcious Saturday afternoon by her babysitter after nibbling on the tuberous plant.

The plant has been identified as Conium Maculatum, a member of the poison hemlock family.

Victoria city parks director Al Smith said today his department intends to find out how bad the situation is before deciding a course of action.

Saanich parks director William Young said he will hold a meeting with staff today and conduct an immediate survey of the municipality.

When asked if he regarded the problem as serious, Young said: "Oh absolutely. We can't ignore it."

Jubilee director Michael Butcher said the hospital is concerned because nurses have reported seeing it growing all over town.

The plant is described as having a white carrot-shaped root with a purple spotted stem.

It can grow to about four feet and this time of year has umbrella-like clusters of white flowers.

The leaves give off an unpleasant odor when bruised.

By JAMES STEWART
FP News Service

MONTREAL — Thousands of Quebec women took over Montreal's famous hockey rink last night for one of the biggest and most unusual political meetings of recent times.

Close to 14,000 women filled the Montreal Forum in a happy, emotional rally to demonstrate their determination to keep Quebec in Canada and to vote No in the referendum on sovereignty-association.

They waved Canadian and Quebec flags, sang French and English songs, swung and swayed to the music of an all-male orchestra. They cheered a score of sensitive and passionate speeches by well-known Quebec women, including retired Senator Therese Casgrain, speaker-elect of the House of Commons Jeanne Sauve, Quebec Liberal member Solange Chaput-Rolland and two Mrs. Ryans.

Madeleine Ryan, wife of Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan, ended the evening with a strong appeal to vote against the PQ project of sovereignty-association and for a better future in a renewed Canadian federation.

Blandine Ryan, the Liberal leader's elderly but sprightly mother, blew kisses at the crowd and said: "I ask you from the bottom of my heart to vote No."

TV personality Michele Tisseyre set the tone for the whole evening: "Welcome sisters, Quebecers and Canadians, to fight for Quebec and against the breaking up of our beautiful Canada — the two are inseparable. Welcome to the partisans of the no-nonsense vote."

The Forum had never seen anything quite like it. The only men in the home ice of the Montreal Canadiens were the Forum staff, guards, the orchestra and most of the journalists.

"This is the first time I've come to the Forum and haven't had to line up to get into the men's room," said a photographer.

One woman wore a T-shirt which read: I'm Just a Girl Who Must Say No. And nearly all the women proudly wore Yvette buttons.

The Yvette theme is a new element in the referendum campaign, and one that has given a new spirit and drive to the federalist forces.

It stems from a remark by Lise Payette, minister for the status of women in the PQ government, which

Khomeini fans Iraq uprising

Times News Services

Ayatollah Khomeini, fuelling fires that threatened to break into open war, urged Iraq's army today to "join the people" and overthrow the regime of President Saddam Hussein.

At the same time, the English language newspaper Arab Times in Kuwait said the entire Gulf region had gone into a state of alert because of speculation the United States might bomb oil fields in southern Iran.

Iran charged that Iraq, at the prompting of the United States, had attacked an Iranian oil facility and a police headquarters near the border with Iraq.

Iran's official Pars news agency said about 70 Iraqi commandos with mortars and rocket-propelled grenades launched the attack before dawn Monday in Kermanshah Province in wester Iran. No casualties were reported, but Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar said the attack cut the flow of oil from the Kermanshah refinery, a major installation.

Iran's official radio also said that "aggressors" had occupied Iranian territory in another portion of the border region but were repulsed by Revolutiolnary Guards. One Revolutionary Guard was killed and 11 wounded, the radio said.

Tehran Radio's Arabic reports today quoted Iranian newspapers as saying Iraq had mobilized 20,000 soldiers along the troubled border with Iran and that Baghdad had expelled at least 15,000 Iranians from Iraq.

The new flurry followed Iranian charges Monday that Iraqi troops, supported by artillery, had crossed the border into Iran. The Iranians claimed the Iraqis had been driven back.

Khomeini, in a nationwide radio broadcast monitored in Kuwait, urged the Iraqi people to "wake up and topple this corrupt regime in your Islamic country before it destroys you."

"All tribes of the Euphrates and Tigris (rivers) should wake up and unite with all Iraqi people to uproot corruption before it is too late, and defend Islam," he said.

Khomeini called on Iraq's army, rated the strongest in the Middle East outside Israel, "not to obey the orders of the foes of the Koran and Islam, but join the people."

Khomeini said Hussein's regime was guilty of collaborating with the United States, which broke off diplomatic relations with Iran on Monday.

The latest U.S. moves brought fears of an American military attack on Iran, although the Arab Times added, "There was no independent confirmation of these reports."

The Kuwaiti news agency KUNA, said both Iran and Iraq had placed their armies on full alert. Other Arabic newspapers said Algeria was trying to mediate the conflict between the two countries.

Reports from Tehran said 70 Iraqi saboteurs attacked oil installations in the western city of Naft-e-Shah — the second assault in two days.

Five years for cultist

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — One of two persons charged in the Peoples Temple tragedy was sentenced today to five years hard labor for the attempted murder of a nine-year-old girl.

Charles Edward Beikman, 44, a cook and shoemaker for the Jonestown community, had pleaded guilty to that charge, but innocent of slaying a top cult member and her three children on Nov. 18, 1978.

Court sources said the state is not expected to pursue charges that Beikman murdered Sharon Amos, an aide to cult leader Jim Jones and public relations officer for the Peoples Temple.

On the same night that Mrs. Amos and three of her children died in Georgetown, their throats slashed ear-to-ear, Jones led more than 900 of his followers to their deaths in a mass murder-suicide in Jonestown, about 240 kilometres northwest of this South American capital.

The mass killings followed the slaying by cult members of U.S. congressman Leo Ryan of Caifornia, three journalists and a defecting cult member on a jungle airstrip near Jonestown.

Another cult member, Larry Layton, 33, a former marine, is charged with the murder of Ryan and the others. His trial has been delayed until May 5.

Beikman had pleaded guilty to the attempted murder of Stephanie Jones, no relation to the cult leader, who was in a bathroom of the house where the Amos family died.

Good luck if Quebec votes 'no'

MONTREAL (CP) — Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney warned Quebecers today that many Canadians would simply say "goodbye and good luck" if the province votes for sovereignty-association.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque "is dead wrong" when he says a yes vote in the referendum will bring the other provinces to the negotiating table, said Blakeney.

"There are many in Western Canada who view with comparative equanimity the splitting of the Quebec-Ontario power centre, with whom they have been battling for close to a century," Blakeney told a businessmen's luncheon.

to make an inventory of Iranian assets in the U.S., frozen by a previous order, to "aid in designing a program against Iran for the hostages, for the hostages families and other U.S. claimants" to file for damages.

Besides the 50 hostages in the embassy, three other American officials are under virtual house arrest at the Iranian Foreign Ministry, where they sought sanctuary when the militants stormed the embassy Nov. 4.

With FBI agents shadowing Iranian diplomats to make sure they leave the U.S., Carter's toughened stance against Iran is drawing cautious reaction from the families of the U.S. hostages — and some surprisingly strong support from Congress.

"It's about time we tried to get their attention some way," said Robert Hohman, father of Sgt. Donald Hohman of West Sacramento, Calif. "The president is right. He has to do it."

There was a similar and bipartisan reaction from the Senate.

Senator George McGovern, the anti-war Democratic presidential candidate of 1972 and a frequent critic of the Carter administration, said Carter should be planning for a naval blockade or even selective air strikes if the hostages aren't released.

However, some of the men trying to replace Carter in the White House next year were less than supportive of his moves, but they offered no speeific alternatives.

Hype for hate from CRTC?

Allan Fotheringham

FP News Service

VANCOUVER — I was driving peacefully along — watching the lady joggers jiggling against the ice-cream-cone tipped mountains — when I heard on the radio that the Grand Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan had been arrested after appearing on a Vancouver radio program.

Two thoughts came instantly to me.

The first was that the radio show, without doubt, would be the John Reynolds hotline on CJOR.

The second was that this must be "ratings week" for local radio.

Both suspicions proved correct (have I ever been wrong?)

Quite the nuttiest and most irresponsible act of the year — inviting David Duke, the 29-year-old buttoned-down hate-monger from Louisiana to appear on his show to hype ratings — was a typical Reynolds ploy.

The fact that immigration officers, citing an outstanding three-year warrant against Duke in the U.S., had to deport the Grand Wizard did not seem to bother Reynolds.

The former Tory MP got what he wanted — police officers present because of five bomb threats to the station and lots of publicity.

Then, yes, it was the period when the Bureau of Broadcast Measurement does its polling on how many listeners are tuned in to what show — the life-or-death figures upon which all advertisers (and hot-line hosts) depend.

The appearance of the Grand Wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, of course, also produced the expected: a collection of weirdos who came out from under rocks and testified that they, too, believed in the Wizard's racism message.

What it should bring into question is the concept of responsibility on radio stations that operate under public licence and supposedly are under some regulation and scrutiny from Ottawa.

Reynolds' desperate tactics (he is trailing badly in the ratings) are nothing new. They are simply one more chapter in the bizarre world of open-mouth radio in Vancouver, which is the hot-line haven of Canada.

All sorts of strange people seem to populate the air-waves in a city where a wave of pensioners and a surfeit of idlers like to get their free entertainment through the wireless.

One of the more prominent hot-liners, Ed Murphy, who was being paid more than $100,000 a year, has just been found guilty of conspiring to offer a Social Credit cabinet minister a $100,000 bribe to get some property released from the Agricultural Land Preserve. He will be sentenced April 30.

Murphy once sued Judy LaMarsh for harsh comments she made about him in her book, Memoirs of a Bird In a Gilded Cage.

One of Murphy's hot-line competitors used to become so enamored of the grape that station management several times had to pluck him from his seat — in mid-sentence, mid-tirade — as if a giant claw from the sky had whisked him away, leaving nothing but dead air and then solemn music for the puzzled listeners.

The chap who has all the ratings, Gary Bannerman (for ethical reasons, he refused the fortune he could make for mouthing commercials), was recently fined $4,000 for criminal contempt of court. The day of the Ku Klux Klan, Bannerman had on a clairvoyant, always a ratings-week staple.

Hot-liners can achieve great prominence. One of them, Barrie Clark, went on to become the British Columbia government's Rentalsman, the tenants' ombudsman.

There is the Oatmeal Savage, Jack Webster, who has taken his flaming mouth and lively brain from radio to TV, where he has just signed a new, two-year contract that gives him five months' holiday each year and an annual income reaching towards $300,000.

Even Webster, though, pales into insignificance beside a one-time colleague at CKNW. Rene Castellani was the station's promotion manager who attempted a non-stop flag-pole sitting stunt for weeks to boost the CKNW favorite charity.

The only problem was that he would sneak down at night and, after visiting his girlfriend, would visit his sick wife in hospital, where he forced into her mouth milkshakes laced with arsenic.

Sent up the river for murder, he was last seen playing the drums at dances for the prison band, which called itself the Hangman's Five.

The CRTC has been in enclaves in Hull, mulling over the weighty matter of pay-TV. It might, for once, take a look at the actions of people who co-operate in a hype-for-hate, as did Mr.Reynolds, who, to follow the Grand Wizzard, looked for ratings with a show on 13-year-olds' back-seat sex.

Lumber mill lays off

FERNIE (CP) — Crows Nest Industries plans to lay off 230 workers April 18 because because of the poor demand for lumber, a company spokesman said Monday.

Workers at the logging, planer and sawmill operation at Elko about 30 kilometres south of this East Kootenay community, were told March 28 that all workers excluding maintenance staff would be laid off for three weeks starting April 18.

But mill general superintendent Gordon Hill said Monday the layoff could last longer.

"It's a market shutdown," he said. "We usually have a maintenance shutdown every summer, but this time we're moving it ahead, hoping the market will improve in the meantime."

Several B.C. forest products companies have laid off workers because demand in the U.S., the largest customer of forest products in B.C., is down substantially.

Hill said he hoped employees would be back to work by May 12.

However, Wayne Nowlin, local president of the International Woodworkers of America, is pessimistic about the length of the layoff and said the union is advising members to apply for unemployment insurance benefits.

Hill also said that Shell Canada Resources Ltd. is attempting to sell the mill, which it purchased along with some property in the area in 1977.

Nowlin also said he has learned through company employees that some 16 companies have made offers to purchase the operations.

Ice fishing turns chilly

PRINCE GEORGE — A 12-year-old boy had some anxious moments Monday when when an ice floe broke loose while he was fishing on it.

David Sexsmith floated more than a kilometre down the North Nechako River before finding a spot where he swam five metres to shore in the freezing water.

David, a Grade 6 student, was none the worse for wear, and planned to be back in school today.

The last straw

As the duration of hostage-taking incident at the U.S. embassy in Tehran nears 160 days, President Jimmy Carter has little choice but to impose diplomatic and economic sanctions against Iran. After watching the sometimes confusing but always thwarted efforts over the past months to negotiate the release of the 50 captives, it is difficult to believe that the president could have been patient for so long. In light of developments over the past week, it seems clear that he has exhausted all options that do not include some form of retaliation.

The best hope for the release of the embassy staff rested with Iranian President Abol Hassan Bani-Sadr. He and Foreign Minister Ghotbzadeh were considered moderates in the political morass of the Iranian government. But Bani-Sadr, whose authority to make a decision regarding the hostages has always been questionable, has again been humiliated by the government's clerical faction led by Ayatollah Khomeini. Bani-Sadr too often negotiated and reneged a deal with the Americans.

The outcome of the proposal last week to transfer the hostages to the custody of the Revolutionary Council had a familiar ring. The investigation earlier this year by the special United Nations Commission into the alleged crimes of the deposed shah was supposed to lead a quick settlement of the captives' fate. While the commission was in Iran the rules of the game changed — the findings of the investigation would have to released in Iran before any move on the hostage issue. It was then announced that regardless of the findings, the Iranian parliament would make the decision on the captives. The whole affair gained an element of absurdity when the militant students themselves, who appear to wield more political power than Bani-Sadr, said they would not release the hostages unless the shah was returned to Iran.

Last week Bani-Sadr agreed that the hostages would be transfered to government care if the United States would promise not to take political, economic or military sanctions against Iran until the Iranian parliament convened this summer. President Carter, condemned by critics and political foes for not taking a harder line, saw this as a step in the right direction and agreed.

In the true contradictory and convoluted style which has become the hallmark of Iranian government, Khomeini then announced that the embassy hostages will remain with their student jailors.

Now, according to Carter the militants were at last prepared to turn the captives over to the Revolutionary Council but the government refused. By this refusal the Iranian government has in fact taken full responsibility for the captives' incarceration.

Carter has no reason to believe that the issue can be successfully resolved without sanctions.

Down on the farm

With those millions of square miles or farm and ranch land between the Rockies and Ontario border, one might think that Westerners would find the verbal warfare waged in B.C. over agricultural land preservation amusing. However, in Alberta anyway, there are some people concerned that urban sprawl is swallowing prime farmland.

Unlike B.C., Alberta has no legislation protecting farmland. As a result, Dr. Fred Bentley, a retired University of Alberta soil sciences professor, says the trend to take good farmland out of production around Edmonton, Calgary and other centers will continue. As food-growing potential is reduced, he says, Albertans will face the prospect of much higher food prices. They and other westerners may eventually loose the status of being the only Canadians self-sufficient in food.

Bentley says the reason no provincial action is being taken to preserve farmland is the volatility of the issue. "If the provincial government tried to enact such legislation, I can't think of anything that would generate more violent, vocal opposition."

As every British Columbian knows, truer words could not be spoken. Even six years after enacting farmland preservation legislation, confrontations between developer and preservationist goes on. Unfortunately, the provincial government has not seized the opportunity to abate the squabbling and confrontation.

A new chairman of the Agricultural Land Commission (ALC) has been appointed but the rules governing appeals of ALC decisions have not changed. Mills Clarke of Naniamo has replaced Gary Runka who resigned last year after the provincial cabinet overturned an ALC decision and allowed development of 626 acres of Langley farmland.

The major concern of Runka and others was the political nature of the decision. Few would disagree that appeals should be allowed on ALC decision. But when the evidence for an appeal is presented behind the closed doors of the provincial cabinet, suspicions are raised. Justice is not seen to be done.

The former Environment Minister Rafe Mair indicated there would be a review of the appeal process. So far nothing has happened. A new, less volatile system might present a better model for Albertans, should their day arrive.

RICHARD GWYN

Bribes would do more harm

OTTAWA — The phrase to "keep your head while those around you are losing theirs" exudes a tone of sanctimonious moralizing common to all the other Victorian chin-ups, like "keep a stiff upper lip" and "play up, play up and play the game."

Yet the advice itself isn't half bad. It may be the best — about how to deal with the predicament we now find ourselves in — which is that, according to the polls, the Parti Quebecois probably will win the Quebec referendum.

For one thing, the P.Q. has "momentum", to use a vogue word. It won the edge, the advantage, in last month's debate in the National Assembly during which the Liberals, very foolishly, debated the motion before them (the precise wording of the referendum question), while P.Q. members very adtroitly talked about what their audience wanted to hear — the meaning of the referendum to Quebecers.

Brilliant psychology

For another, and much more important, the P.Q. has managed brilliantly to transform the psychological context of the referendum question. On paper, the question still reads as before — an invitation to grant the government a "mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association."

In their hearts and minds, however, many Quebecers now read the substance of the question quite differently. They interpret it as an invitation to answer with a Oui or a Non the question: "Are you proud to be a Quebecer?"

Unless the pshchological context of the question can be changed again — say to, "Are you so uncertain of your identity as a Quebecer that you want to run away and hide?" — it is hard to see how the Parti Quebecois can fail to win a "Oui" vote of much under 60 per cent.

Here's the rub. The P.Q. will interpret the results any way its wants to. It will regard a victory as inheriting a solemn, democratic and irrevocable mandate to undertake sovereignty-association negotiations to the limit.

The negotiations will go nowhere but out of the debacle. The P.Q. will hope to find an excuse to call a snap election with a favorable chance of winning it. Sometime later will come the second referendum.

In the midst of this predicament, we can react in two ways. Keep our cool. Or get frantic.

New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield, an impassioned and deeply-caring Canadian, is, it seems to me, getting frantic. "Speeches aren't enough any more," he says. "Change must come from . . . the legislature and the Parliament of Canada."

. . .constitutional change now

During his visit to Ottawa, Hatfield also predicted, "It's going to take time, but it's inevitable. If the P.Q. wins (the referendum), the province will become independent."

The flaw in Hatfield's prophecy is that it can be self-fulfilling. The more importance we outsiders attach to the referendum result, the more important the result becomes to Quebecers. Willy-nilly, we risk handing to the P.Q. the mandate they seek

The same flaw attaches to proposals, now being raised in Ottawa, that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau should intervene personally in the referendum campaign. Last weekend, Trudeau and Liberal Leader Claude Ryan met to try to agree on a common strategy.

As yet, all Trudeau has said is that he will "not be silent" during the referendum. Nor should he. He is the Prime Minister of all Canadians. He is a Quebecer, with the same rights as every citizen of that province.

The trick for Trudeau will be to go far enough to have some effect, but not so far as to be counter-productive. In the end, the choice will be made by Quebecers alone.

The rest of us, out in what commonly is called English-Canada, although many of us living in it aren't English-Canadians — and so is better called Rump Canada — can be supportive, understanding, encouraging, but not a great deal else. To concoct hurriedly constitutional proposals, as Hatfield suggests, would be too obviously a bribe — particularly since we said nothing so long as the polls tilted the other way.

Better deal

To keep our cool, all we need to do is to remember that a great many Quebecers who will vote "Oui" will not intend by this vote "Non" to Canada. Only Yes to themselves, their pride, their dignity, their self-esteem.

Let's be honest with ourselves. If Quebecers in fact vote "Non", wouldn't we on the outside think a little less of them? We know this though we'd never say so out loud. They know it. Can't we trust Quebecers, therefore, to know that they won't have given Premier Rene Levesque a mandate to negotiate independence but will have voted "Oui" only to get themselves a better deal?

To paraphrase another Victorian aphorism, if only we'd stitched for them a better deal at the time they first asked for it, we'd have saved ourselves nine years, or more, of trying to resew Confederation.

"You gave me a ticket, you big bully!"

Driving mad

After watching the news on TV where ICBC is not going to sponsor driving schools nor give drivers refunds after learning to drive, I was really angry when it was said drivers schools don't really put out good drivers. That is a gross insult and I take exception.

The young people at Young Drivers of Canada are so highly skilled, conscientious, and so able to impart their knowledge that many of their students drive away with more confidence and ability that if everyone took the course there would be a higher percentage of good drivers.

If all driving schools have instructors like the Y. D. of C. then there should be many good drivers on the road. However, my point is if ICBC no longer wants to sponsor driving schools don't knock them, they do a good job and should be commended instead of being disparaged. — Mrs. F. A. Michael, 3501 Savannah Ave.

Obey the oath

The front page story in the Times Mar. 22 about the KKK and Mr. Wolfgang Droege, compels me to speak out.

As one who is also an immigrant to Canada and recently received Canadian citizenship and who is also a partial German ancestry, I would like to say Mr. Droege: I have been married to a native lady for 30 years and have raised a fine son with her. I have many good friends among the Native Indians as well as people of other minority groups including Blacks, Orientals and East Indians. I also have friends in the Jewish community.

The Canadian Bill of Rights ensure certain rights and freedoms to all Canadians regardless of race, national origin, color, religion or sex, I refer you specifically to Part I, paragraph I sub-paragraphs a, b, c, d, e, f, in particular sub-paragraph e, which guarantees freedom of assembly and association. I would interpret this to mean that in part, that interracial marriage be the personal prerogative of the parties involved and as such is none of your damn business.

In short, Mr. Droege, marry whoever you like, make friends with those of your choosing, but don't attempt to deny the rest of us of our basic constitutional rights and freedoms by trying to impose your racist beliefs on us. — Roy T. Bradfield, 2134 Skylark Avenue, Sidney.

Ferries essential

When the British Columbia Ferry System was conceived by the late W. A. C. Bennett and his B.C. Social Credit government, the entire system should have been placed under the federal government "Essential Services Act."

The lifeline essential ferry system connecting mainland Vancouver to that of Vancouver Island is an extremely important part of the Trans Canada Highway, the western terminus of the Trans Canada Highway is Tofino, V.I.

Therefore, failing the proper action by the W. A. C. Bennett government, the NDP should have placed this system under the act.

Now we have the Bill Bennett Social Credit government at the helm, and a very inconvenient ferry strike confronting the general public, and in particular aggravating the citizens of Vancouver Island.

Due to the fact that the federal government does not appear anxious to intercede in strikes when it is their sole responsibility to do so, then may I suggest that the B.C. provincial government introduce their own "Essential Services Act" which will cover the B.C. ferry fleet and the overflow carried by the CPR ferries.

Failing to take the appropriate action by this Social Credit provincial government should bring about their resignation, in order for a new B.C. government to take positive action, which will expedite these essential ferries to be placed under the "Essential Services Act," be it federal or provincial jurisdiction. — Lloyd Phillips, 904-1275 Haro Street, Vancouver.

Sincere thanks

On behalf of Greater Victoria Fire Fighters Muscular Dystrophy Association, I would like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank all the people who helped to make our Muscular Dystrophy Drive such a tremendous success again this year.

The fire fighters say "Thank You" to the local governing bodies for allowing us to run our drive throughout the various areas, to the store merchants and shopping centre managers for allowing us to place our canvassing booths on their premises, to the Reynolds Secondary School Combo for providing entertainment in the area shopping centres, to Loomis Armored Car Company for services we could not do without, and finally to all the thousands of wonderful people who braved the intolerable weather to donate so generously again this year.

This year we raised almost $43,000.00 in less than 12 hours and with donations still coming in daily, we feel it could go much higher. With your help it will.

Once again, on behalf of the Greater Victoria Muscular Dystrophy Association and all the fire fighters from Victoria, Saanich, Central Saanich, North Saanich, Sidney, M.O.T. (airport), View Royal, D.N.D., Colwood, Metchosin, Langford, Oak Bay and Sooke, may I say sincerely thank you very, very much. — B. Dallin, G.V.F.M.D.A.

Crystal clear

What a wealth of memories returned after visiting the new Crystal Gardens and meeting aquatic stars of 50 years ago — the Wellburn girls, Archie McKinnon, Art Stott and many others including Bert Zala — remember his orchestra? He still entertains on summer afternoons at the Butchart Gardens.

It recalled place names which have faded into oblivion such as the free bathing house at the Gorge and the many people who swam at Foul Bay, Horseshoe Bay and the Willows during the tough 1930s, names such as Dardanelles, Outer Wharf, the Junction, Rithets Hill, Terry's and the ride on the four wheeled Spring Ridge trolly to V.H.S. — Herb Warren, No. 6-1041 St. Charles St.

Save the Capitol

The Canadian Bureau of Statistics indicates that in 1969 there were 1,157 regular motion picture theatres operating in Canada. By 1977 there were only 1,094 theatres operating. In just eight years, 63 theatres had been closed or demolished. It is the old, historic structures that are being destroyed. Just last year in Saskatchewan, Prince Albert lost the Strand Theatre and Saskatoon lost its Capitol Theatre.

Now the same thing is about to happen in Victoria. The Capitol Theatre represents the ornate "picture palace" built to celebrate the showing of motion pictures. It is a symbol of an era that has long passed. Because of its cultural and historical significance, the Capitol Theatre must be preserved for future generations to enjoy. — Terry Herdin, 3147 Qu-appelle St.

The real thing

There is nothing in the world I or any other postie would like better than to get $35 a minute for our coffee break.

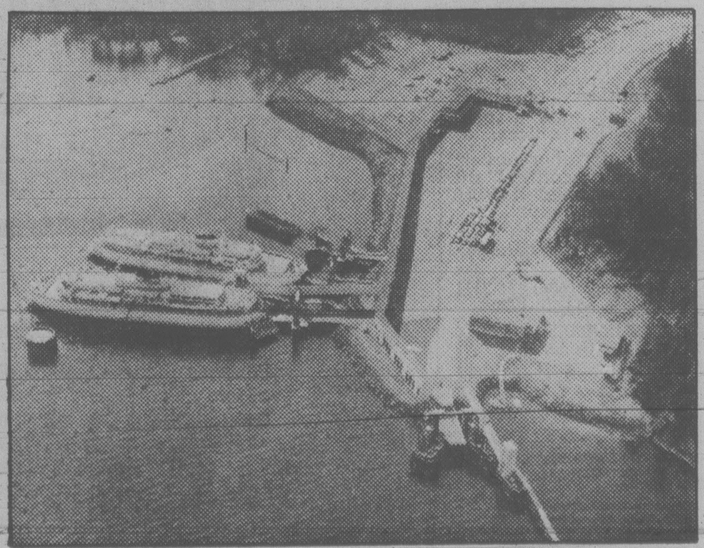
According to your March 31/80 article on page 11, we could all retire early. By my calculations, at approximately 250 working days a year, 10 minutes a day, at $35 a minute that's a handsome sum of $87,500 a year. Add our salary of $18,365.95 (that's top rate for a letter carrier) and that's a whopping $105,865.95 a year. At that rate maybe some of your editors will try and join our staff as well as a few other executives in town.

Now try the real thing, $350 once a year on or about the 15th of December for 10 minutes a day, 250 days a year that's a big .14 cents a minute, quite a difference from your $35.

I wish once in a while people would get the letter carriers straight. We wear uniforms and put up with more abuse than we should have to, and no we are not millionaires, nor are we perfect. If there is a company out there that can claim 100 per cent efficiency then please help out the rest of us.

Most of the 'Posties' care about our people and will try to do small favors for them as much as possible. Day after day however, when you get battered around you finally just want to shake your shoulders and say "what the heck is the use". You, the newspaper and the public, have done the most of anyone to destroy any pride in the post office. So maybe things don't appear to be as good as things used to be but then what is these days. Remember, we wait just like everyone else for cheques, papers and letters.

If you have ideas for better service submit them and stop complaining. We never or hardly ever hear the good, only the bad. — Karen Ziehr, 994 McBriar Ave.



Ferry system is a lifeline and should be strike-free, says reader.

Pentagon's MX 'doodles' cost rises to $56 billion

By HAROLD JACKSON
Manchester Guardian

WASHINGTON — The projected cost of the new U.S. mobile missile system has nearly doubled — and it is little more than a few doodles on a Pentagon blotter. A report by the Congressional Central Accounting Office puts the final cost of development and deployment at $56 billion rather than the $33 billion announced last June when President Carter decided to go ahead with the project.

By the time it is finally tucked into its holes in the ground, somewhere between 1986 and the end of the century, the MX missile should have caused more rows, more heart-searching, and more desperation than almost all the weapons research put together.

History's biggest

The statisticians in Washington say that the scheme will be the largest construction project ever undertaken in history. The missile itself will weigh 95 tons and will be able to transport 10 nuclear warheads, each independently targeted, with a combined explosive power equivalent to three million tons of TNT. (The bomb dropped on Hiroshima was equivalent to 13,000 tons).

The whole point of the system is that it should be immune from Russia's evolving capacity to knock out the existing U.S. arsenal of fixed-site missiles at one blow. So the MX is designed to be moved around and play hide-and-seek with Soviet reconnaissance satellites. Each of the 200 rockets will have an option of 23 silos connected by road in which to hide. This means that the Soviet Union would have to hit 4,600 bomb-proof shelters to be sure of wiping out retaliatory capacity.

Cheating checks

That compares with only 1,054 in the present system and is well beyond the number of missiles which American intelligence calculates the Kremlin will have by the late 1980s and beyond. Much of the point of the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty was to limit Soviet development but to leave a loophole for the MX. The only problem was that the treaty also required both sides to allow the other to check that no cheating was going on.

So the refinement built into the MX system is that each of the 4,600 silos will have a sliding roof. At a Soviet request, they can all be opened to enable satellite photographs to be taken of the entire complex to demonstrate that no more than 200 missiles are hidden.

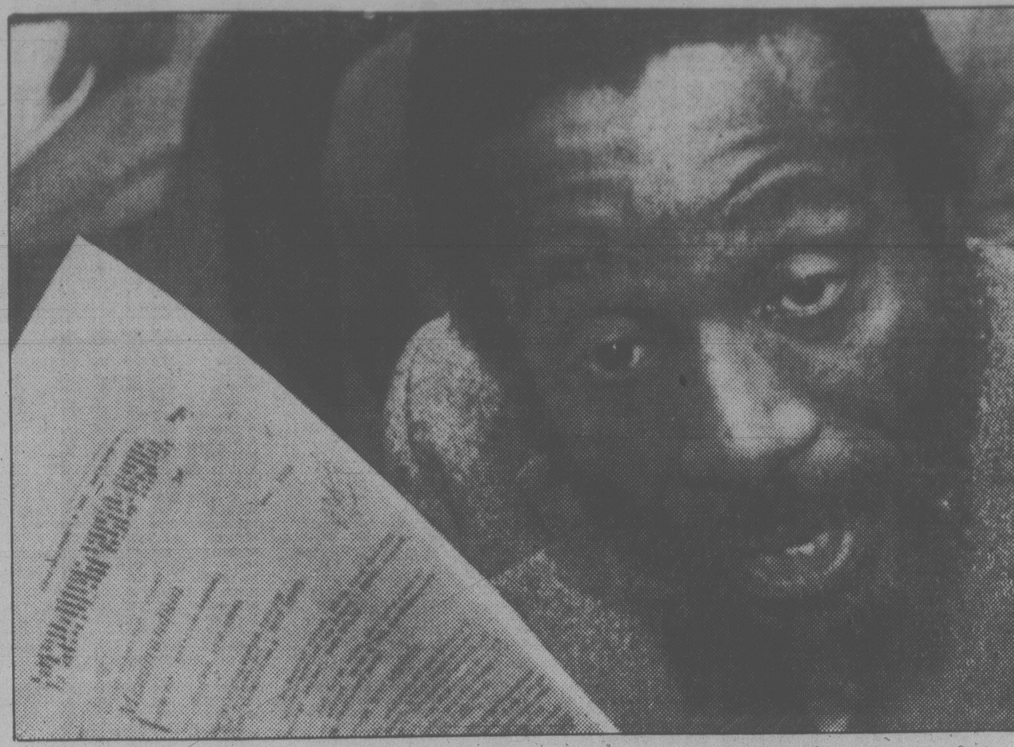
The transporter for the rocket will be a behemoth which was initially going to weigh 335 tons but which has now grown to 500 tons. The road system needed to connect the silos will be 10,000 miles long and will have to withstand the extraordinary strains imposed by this laden giant.

So the project will require at least 2.7 billion tons of cement and will use 121 billion gallons of water. All the highways in the U.S. put together come to 42,000 miles and they took decades to construct.

As the commercial railway system continues its steady decline, the Pentagon will be building 2,000 miles of new track to service the missile sites. The workforce is calculated at about 100,000 — and these are only the current estimates.

One of the congressmen whose constituents will feel the full impact of this — representative James Santini of Nevada — said recently: "Everytime I blink my eyes, the project gets bigger, costs more, requires more materials and manpower, and takes more public land."

Two states are destined to house the missiles, Nevada and Utah. The average density of population is one person to every two square miles and most of them are clustered into tiny settlements of about 450 people. The impact that 100,000 workers would have is unimaginable.



Dick Gregory . . . selling a message of paranoia on cheering campuses

Big bucks made in conspiracy delusions

By IVAN GOLDMAN

(Goldman teaches Communications at California State University. He wrote this for The Los Angeles Times)

"They" are out to kill "us," says Dick Gregory. And although he never quite defines "us," he does discuss at some length who "they" are — the Trilateral Commission, FBI, CIA, Russians, large corporations, "the six creepy, degenerate old men" (sorry, he doesn't name them) who run the world, and, most of all, the United States government.

In a rambling, frenetic discourse at Cal State University in Los Angeles, the social activist and former comic recently painted a hideous, obsessive view of a world in which there is no result that does not emanate from a conspiratorial cause.

For example:

● The Jonestown massacre was carried out by CIA-FBI commandos, who, after murdering the 900 inhabitants with poison gas, smuggled heroin into the United States by concealing it within the bodies.

● There was no landing on the moon. The $30 billion was spent on weather modification "to kill us." The recent California rains were a machinery test.

● The United States once bombed Hanoi because Gregory was expected to arrive in the city on that particular day.

● "They" built 98 per cent of all nuclear reactors on earthquakes faults — "to kill us."

● The Iran and Afghanistan situations are scenarios carefully and totally orchestrated by the Soviet and American governments working as a team.

Being present at this recital — it lasted three hours — was akin to being forced to watch an unhappy husband and wife tear into each other's psyches. George and Martha on the college circuit. Breakdown for dollars.

I don't call attention to Gregory's degeneration to ridicule him, but to note that he was cheered, not challenged, by an audience of 450, mostly students. There was not even a hint of disbelieving.

For we have reached a stage in our history where delusions sell for two bucks a head plus adulation. We are bombarded by the theory that nothing is as it seems. The simplistic lure of this message is that while no cause is simple, every effect can be simply explained. And so an entire audience of otherwise rational persons is eager to be comforted by the belief that somebody out there is pulling something.

If there are witnesses and photos of Sirhan Sirhan shooting Bobby Kennedy, then of course he didn't do it, for the more evidence there is, the more elaborate the scheme. Paranoia offers delights both exotic and multifarious.

"How many of you know that Karl Marx was a correspondent for the Chicago Tribune?" (Actually, it was the New York Tribune.) Some one-fourth of us raise our hands in response. Thus, "communism was invented by Wall Street," the oracle tells us. "They sent Marx to Russia to start it up, but they're all in it together."

This line of thought is practically word-for-word doctrine of the John Birch Society. And so the delusionary fringe of left and right meet in some harmonious never-neverland. Communism, you see, is merely a capitalist ploy — a kind of theatrical left jab to keep us from watching for the right cross of banker autocracy.

Gregory has more imagination than the Birchers, though, for his spiel includes lessons about a government founded on "freemasonry" and witchcraft: "Why do you think there were 13 stars on the flag?"

He's not kidding, either, as he adds and subtracts numbers in a bewildering, almost painful illogic — the date of Christmas, the vertebrae in a spinal column, the Tuesday of federal elections. All of it adds up to occult doings.

The Soviet Union is a partner (or satellite, it's not clear which) in all this, and both superpowers are out to crush Islam and to challenge the greater sorcery of Africans who can leave thought messages on trees, to be transmitted to those who pass by years later.

"The CIA monitors every phone call in the United States," he tells us. "That whole crazy game. You better keep your eyes open."

Students nod in agreement. "Right on, Dick." Later, the student newspaper reports the talk with enthusiasm.

Missing in all this is that one necessary commodity of higher education — perspective. In Gregory's presentation, there is no reference to philosophy or science or literature. It's as though the whole of history were an accident until the 20th Century, when suddenly all events could be traced to one ubiquitous, conspiratorial design. All that went before has no relationship to now.

This hungry belief in distantly wicked wraiths comforts Gregory and those who cheer him. Whatever is wrong in their lives can be traced to the cabal. They savor delicious visions of ever-widening schemes for they cannot bear to know the existential reality: No one is more reponsible for what we do than us.

Down at the plastic corral

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — They come last night for my credit cards. "Ain't no use you trying to bolt the door to keep us out," they shouted down in the street. "We know you got credit cards in there and we aim to take 'em."

My boys was right scared. "Better throw 'em the credit cards, pap," says Dan. "Them's the U.S. inflation fighters. You make 'em mad and they'll run the mortgage rates up so high you won't be able to buy a hat to house your office in."

I told Dan to shut up his snivelin' and git the credit cards drawn up in a circle, and I told Jimmy to take off over the back fence and buy us a batch of guns with the Visa card.

"Guns kill people, pap," Jimmy said.

"If you buy 'em on credit cards," I explained, "it ain't the guns that kill people, it's the credit cards that kill people."

Pretty soon Jimmy comes back gunless. Couldn't git to the gun market, he says, on account of there's no gas in the horse. I give him the Exxon card and tell him to scoot up to Mac's gas station, but before he can git off, who turns up down in the street but the schoolmarm.

"Talk to me, Will," she is wailin'. "Talk to me before it's too late."

So I let her in out of respect for education, and she is about to float away in a gullywasher of tears.

"How much longer is this going to go on, Will?" she says.

I could see she was sick at heart about all the credit and the high rate of interest and the inflation and all that.

"All you can think of," she says, "is credit-card buying. Credit cards to buy guns with. Credit cards to gas up the horse. You take me out to dinner and what do you do? You pay with a credit card. Give it up, Will. Give it up, please, so you'll be able to stop buying guns and gasoline and food and clothes and start all over again going hungry, and letting the car rust, and learning to dress like a bum."

"Marm," says I, "they's things a man's gotta do, and a man's gotta do what he's gotta do, and the only way I learned to do 'em is with credit cards."

This reminded me of somethin' I had to do, so I phone up and order some circus tickets and seats on the aisle for a Broadway opening and charge 'em on my American Express card. It is what they call "the prestigious American Express gold card." I am mighty proud of that card and the way it makes headwaiters' eyes bug half way out of their heads when they see it and realize I am prestigious.

The schoolmarm's eyes bugged a mite, too, when she seen me pull it out to read the number off to the ticket salesmen. "Will," she says, changing her tune, "I didn't know you had the prestigious gold card."

That warn't all I had, I told her. I showed her my silver card from Bloomingdale's, my brown card from Macy's, my dark green card from Lord & Taylor, my light green card from the international airlines' cartel, my blue card from Brooks Brothers and my tomato-paste-red card from Horowitz's Pizza Carry Out.

Then I showed her my Mobil card and my Texaco card and my Gulf card, my Hertz card and my Avis card.

"Will," she says, "it's like your whole life has turned to plastic."

To prove it warn't, I showed her my Bell Telephone card, which was just a little flimsy piece of cardboard. This last took the glint out of her eye. I guess cardboard doesn't make her greed juices bubble the way plastic does.

"Give it up, Will," she says. "What does it all mean to you? Suits, shoes, jewelry, automobiles — is that all you want in life? Christmas presents, books, travel, food, long-distance telephone calls, carry-out pizza — there's more to life than that."

"What?" says I.

"Drabness. Tedium. Shabbiness. Sitting home nights listening to interest rates rise. Squatting on the front steps on hot summer nights wishing you could afford a television set and feeling the sweat running down behind your ears."

"You talk like one of them born-again Democrat economists," says I.

"Give up your credit cards, Will," says she.

"I'll give up my credit cards," says I, "when they pry them from my cold dead hand."

About this time Danny sets up a cry. "Pap," says he, "the Feds is packin' up and goin' home."

I told him I never doubted they would, since the only thing else they could do was charge the house.

"What made you think that they wouldn't charge?" asks the schoolmarm.

"Well, ma'am," says I, "I don't rightly see how fellas that don't believe in credit cards can do much chargin'. What would they use for identification if we asked for somethin' a little more impressive than their driver's licence?"

Stelco expansion planned

TORONTO (CP) — The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. has announced it will spend $3.3 million to expand production of oil drilling equipment at its Edmonton finishing works.

A 2,200-square-metre addition to the plant will be completed by mid-1981, boosting production capacity of sucker rods by 80 per cent to about 5.5 million metres a year. The expansion will create 60 new jobs.

Sucker rods are attached to the nodding "horse heads" on the surface of oil wells and, linked by couplings, extend vertically down through tubing to the oil pumps.

Husky to increase refinery production

CALGARY (CP) — Husky Oil Ltd. has approved an increase in the capacity of the company's Lloydminster heavy oil refinery from 12,000 barrels a day to 25,000 barrels a day, the company has announced.

Husky said the production increase, planned for completion in the second half of 1982, will cost an estimated $55 million.

The company said the expansion will provide an additional market in Canada for western Canadian heavy crude oil and will increase asphalt supply in areas which have experienced shortages in recent years.

Husky said some road-building and construction projects were restricted in western Canada in 1979 due to a limited availability of asphalt.

In a related development, Husky has also applied to the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board for a permit to construct a crude oil pipeline from Cold Lake, Alta., to Lloydminster.

$5M plant

EDMONTON (CP) — Sulmar Canada Ltd. and Procor Ltd. have announced plans for a $5-million sulphur granulating plant near Fort McMurray.

Duncan McRae, sales engineer with Procor, said the company is waiting for provincial government approval but expects to start construction early next month.

The plant will have an initial capacity of 280,000 tonnes of sulphur a year. The sulphur will be trucked from the Syncrude Canada Ltd. and Suncor Ltd. oil sands plants, processed at the Lynton siding south of Fort McMurray and transported to markets on the Northern Alberta Railway.

McRae said that in addition to sulphur processing the project will require steam generating, rail-car loading, liquid sulphur storage, formed sulphur storage, truck turn-around and other facilities.

New York

Stock prices edged up in quiet trading today, halting the plunge that took place Monday amid fears of a recession and new Mideast tensions.

Fears of recession and growing Mideast problems had contributed to the slide Monday, but there was little news to affect the market and it settled into a nervous pattern.

Oil stocks rebounded from the previous day's slides and were generally up. Mobil gained 2 to $64 and Getty rose 1¼ to $72¼. But Atlantic Richfield fell ¾ to $83 and Exxon dropped ⅝ to $54⅞.

Pan American World Airways, which gained Civil Aeronautics Board approval to continue flying the Miami-London route, rose ¼ to -4¼.

Seagram gained another 2¾ to $56. Sun Co. on Monday offered $2.3 billion for Seagram's U.S. oil and gas properties.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index fell 6.4 to 426.2.

Industrials, banks and oils eased.

Golds firmed and Canadian stocks were lower.

Canada racks up $312M auto deficit

TORONTO (CP) — Canada had a $312.5-million deficit in automotive trade with the U.S. in the first two months of this year, the Automotive Parts Manufacturers Association of Canada has reported.

That was a slight drop from the $330.4-million deficit reported for the similar 1979 period, reflecting a drop in both imports and exports so far this year.

Exports for the period this year totalled $1.5 billion, down from $2.1 billion in the similar 1979 period. Shipments of motor vehicles to the U.S. dropped to $976.1 million compared with $1.3 billion in 1979, reflecting falling demand in the U.S. for large cars which make up the bulk of Canadian vehicle production.

Imports totalled $1.8 billion, down from $2.4 billion in 1979. Vehicle imports totalled $689.1 million, compared with $767.5 million a year ago.

Bankruptcies decline in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The number of bankruptcies has risen by about 14 per cent over the past year in every Canadian province except British Columbia, where the number has declined slightly.

The Vancouver office of the federal consumer and corporate affairs department reports 1,813 business and non-business bankruptcies filed in B.C. and the Yukon in the fiscal year ending March 31, down from 1,900 in the previous fiscal year.

The rate had been rising steadily during the previous four years.

Experts attribute the decrease to the strength of B.C.'s economy.

"B.C. is more prosperous than the rest of Canada and is therefore less subject to the strains of the economic slowdowns which affect bankruptcies," said Kenji Okuda, Simon Fraser University economics department chairman.

"The unemployment situation in B.C. is not as bad as the East Coast and Quebec, and this has a direct relationship to personal bankruptcies," said P.J. Armer, senior credit official with the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Non-business and personal bankruptcies continue to lead business bankruptcies by a substantial margin. In 1979-80 there were 1,167 of the former compared with 646 of the latter.

Crest Brook gets investment boost

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese paper company and a trading house are planning to boost investment in a joint venture they have established in Canada for pulp and lumber production, officials have announced.

Officials of Honshu Paper Co., a leading Japanese pulp maker, and Mitsubishi Corp., the giant trading house, declined to say how much more they will invest in Crest Brook Forest Industries Ltd. but said the money will be used to expand thermo-mechanical pulp-production facilities.

Crest Brook Forest Industries was established in Vancouver in 1967, with the two Japanese firms owning a 53.8-per-cent share and Canadian interests the rest.

Officials of the two Japanese firms said a feasibility study is scheduled to be completed by May and they hope to start construction of a new production facility capable of manufacturing about 250 tons of thermo-mechanical pulp a day as soon as possible.

Commerce, Royal raise term rates

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the Royal Bank of Canada announced they have raised the interest rates paid on term deposits, effective today.

The new percentage rates paid by the Bank of Commerce, with previous rates in brackets, are: for deposits of 30 to 59 days, 14.5 (13.5); 60 to 89 days, 14.75 (13.75); 90 to 179 days, 15 (14); 180 to 364 days, 14.5 (14); one to two years, 14 (13.75); two to four years, 13.5 (13.25).

The Royal Bank'snew term deposit rates, together with previous rates, are: 30to 59 days, 14.5 (13.5); 60 to 89 days, 14.75 (13.75); 90 to 119 days, 15 (14); 120 to 149 days, 14.5 (13.5); 150 to 179 days, 14.25 (13.5); 180 to 269 days, 14 (13.25); 270 to 364 days, 14 (13.25); one to two years, 14 (13.25); two to three years, 13.5 (12.75); three to four years, 13.25 (12.75).

Hong Kong route sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hong Kong-based Cathay Pacific Airways is seeking permission to operate the first non-stop air service between Vancouver and Hong Kong, the company said today.

Cathay Pacific said it is prepared to operate three flights a week.

The application will be discussed at meetings between Canada and the United Kingdom, scheduled to open in London on April 14.

B.C. TEL

Donald W. Champion

The appointment of Donald W. Champion as Vice-President - Customer Service is announced by the British Columbia Telephone Company.

Mr. Champion joined the company in 1953 and has served in managerial positions in Prince George, Terrace and Nelson. He was appointed General Manager of Okanagan Telephone Company in 1970 and became Customer Service Manager of B.C. Tel's Coastal East Division in May, 1977.

Most recently, Mr. Champion was Vice-President - Supply, Transportation and Buildings, Chairman of Canadian Telephones and Supplies Ltd. and a director of C.T. & S. and Viscount Industries Ltd. He became President of Canadian Telephones and Supplies Ltd. in December, 1979.

In his new position, Mr. Champion will remain a director of C.T. & S. and Viscount Industries Ltd. His new responsibilites include administration of the company's customer services as well as engineering and construction throughout the province.

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were slightly higher in moderate trading on the Canadian bond market Monday.

The short end of the market was unchanged. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues rose one-quarter of a point. Corporate issues remained the same.

Day-to-day money was available at 16 per cent.

Dealers said the announcement of a Government of Canada issue om April 15 has side-tracked most account interest in the market until that date.

The rise in short rates last week appears to have strenghened the dollar, an analyst at Stodgell Cochran Murray Ltd. said.

Women rally at the Forum to say 'no' to referendum

attempted to ridicule Madeleine Ryan. Payette told a meeting that Ryan was the type of man she detested and that furthermore, he was married to an "Yvette."

Guy and Yvette are the Dick and Jane of a certain type of Quebec primer for children which stereotypes roles for the sexes. Yvette is the docile submissive little girl learning to become a housewife while Guy gets the role of the dominant sex at home and in society.

Payette later apologized in the national assembly, saying she had not intended to cause pain to anyone in particular. But it was too late.

Angered and insulted Liberal women organized a "Brunch for Yvettes" at a Quebec City hotel last weekend and nearly 2,000 women showed up. They heard speeches from several of the women who also spoke last night, including Madeleine Ryan herself, who far from being an Yvette, is an impressive public performer. She has long played active roles in social, educational and religious affairs as well as being a wife to Claude Ryan and bringing up their five children.

The success of the Quebec City brunch showed Quebec Liberal organizers and the No Committee for the Referendum that they had a new and powerful issue. They immediately began organizing a similar meeting for Montreal, gladly identifying supporting women as Yvettes, to keep the Payette insult fresh in the public mind.

The response from the Montreal area, was so great that the event, originally planned for a Montreal hotel, had to be transferred to the Forum.

The federalist forces already had a strong women's organization, called Les Quebecoise pour le Non, or Quebec Women voting No. But Lise Payette's gibe has given them a new impetus and the catchy "Yvette" symbol has already become part of the Quebec political vocabulary.

The "femmes federalistes" have been able to unite and contest Payette's attitude towards certain kind of women, who happen to be rather numerous. They have also been able to unite against Payette's suggestion that there is some kind of link between the liberation of women and the liberation of Quebec.

Last night's impressive show of strength by the "Yvettes" of Quebec, an all-women effort, is the biggest boost the No side in the referendum has had in a long time. The general feeling here is that support has been growing for a yes vote to give the PQ government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association.

New chief at ICBC

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. has a new man in charge.

J.C. Gilmer, retired president of CP Air today was appointed chairman of the board of ICBC.

He replaces Ralph Gillen who resigned at the end of February to take up full-time duties with the Canadian Commercial Corporation.

Gilmer has been a member of the ICBC board since November, 1978.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, responsible for the insuyrance corporation, also announced the appointment of two new directors.

Walter Dyck is senior partner in the chartered accountant firm of Campbell, Sharpe.

Lawrence Eberhardt, now retired from active business was for many years a senior officer in the Jim Pattison organization.

'I'll break your legs' gov't collector says

TORONTO (CP) — A man who phoned the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission to ask how long he had to pay back a $62 unemployment insurance overpayment was shocked to hear: "Pay it back by 4 p.m. or I'll break your legs."

The caller, amazed by the answer, phoned again a few minutes later only to be told the collection officer was too busy to take the call because he was "breaking someone else's arms."

Eventually the debtor went to the collection office and asked to see the officer "who broke clients' legs." In the argument that followed the commission official asked the caller if he wanted to "go out feet first."

Finally feeling threatened, the caller left to get help. He returned with his brother, a fireman for the municipality of Hampstead, a suburb of Montreal. A scuffle ensued between the fireman and the collection officer who works in the Montreal area.

What had started as a joke — the collection officer throught he recognized the caller's voice as that of an old friend — ended with a 15-day suspension for the official. The suspension was appealed by the collection officer to the Public Service Staff Relations Board but an adjudicator recently upheld the suspension.

Adjudicator Emile Moalli said it was difficult to understand why the collection officer did not immediately telephone the debtor when he realized his mistake in identifying him. Moalli also said the second commission employee who participated in the extended joke by saying the first officer was busy breaking someone's arms should not be complimented for taking part.

The $62 insurance overpayment has been re-paid.

Expansion in works for Pat Bay but when will Ottawa get it off the runway?

Not many of these travellers have kind words for what they find at Patricia Bay

Bill Halkett photos

Nothing plush, just a decent terminal

By AL FORREST

Mayor Norma Sealey of Sidney says the capital region is fed up being short-changed by Ottawa with a totally inadequate airport terminal.

"We're not asking for a palace. just something large enough to handle the traffic."

Her complaints have been echoed across the region, from labor groups to business organizations.

Almost nobody has a good word to say about the facilities at Pat Bay.

Jim Mills, the airport manager, is aware of the growing complaints and he has an expansion plan in the works.

But nothing happens overnight and it would take a minor miracle to get any action this year.

Mills said it will be September before working plans are completed and he was unable to estimate when Ottawa might get the project under way.

Meanwhile the steam builds up:

— International flights are under severe restrictions because of limited customs facilities.

— Luggage loading and unloading is slow and Victoria has the only outdoor luggage ramp at a major airport west of New Brunswick.

— The small coffee shop is often full. Trying to get a cup of coffee before takeoff can be difficult.

— Victoria is one of very few terminals where people must stand in the rain to watch planes arriving or taking off.

— Space is inadequate for customer services and line-ups are often long and unwieldy.

— The airport has no radar.

Traffic is growing weekly and a real crunch will come two years from now when Victoria opens its convention centre.

A large percentage of convention delegates arrive by air and the sudden influxes will put serious strains on a facility already at its practical limits.

American companies want to use Victoria as a starting point for Alaska cruises and this will add to airport congestion, especially in the customs lineups.

There have been several announcements — made near election times — about possible airport expansion but they have all been false alarms.

Some Victoria businessmen are envious when they see a city like Spokane, Wash., get $20 million for airport expansion while Victoria has been trying for years to get only $4 million.

They also point to the millions Ottawa has sunk into the Mirabel airport in Quebec for a terminal far bigger than justified by the traffic.

At Pat Bay, Mills insists Ottawa at least is now aware of Victoria's needs, although there is no automatic guarantee approvals will be forthcoming.

The present plan, which may or may not get Ottawa's approval at year's end, involves doubling the size of the existing terminal building.

The $4 million price tag was in 1978 dollars and probably is over $5 million now.

The terminal would be kept and there would be a long, low addition to the west, where the outdoor baggage facility is now located. This new building would provide fast indoor luggage pickup, space for an enlarged customs clearance centre, and gates for arrivals and departures.

A second wing, a two-storey building, would be added to the east of the present structure.

It would contain ticket counters and offices for the airlines. It would also be the area for receiving luggage and preparing to load it aboard the planes.

Mills said the coffee shop would be enlarged and a cocktail lounge added.

Construction would take two years after the start date.

But nobody knows when that starting date is.

The only outdoor luggage ramp west of New Brunswick tests everybody's patience

TOWN TALK

Is that Passage as in massage? Or would the name of B.C. Ferry Corporation's new magazine be closer to Tassage?

To long-suffering regulars on the blue-and-white vessels, the eight pages of fluff from the people's navy was the sort of blatant pitch that gives good propaganda a bad name.

The new mag's first issue, optimistically slugged Vol. 1, No. 1, shows Charles Gallagher, the corporation's general manager and chief executive officer, relaxed, smiling, hands in pockets

Says Gallagher: "In these articles and other features about our many interesting destinations, we hope to provide you and the occasional or one-time user with factual and interesting information that may enable you to understand the reasons for the way we provide service.'

The only article in the first issue, entitled "The Soaring Cost of Staying Afloat," is a decidedly one-sided look at the economics of the ferry service.

One question Gallagher might consider answering in a future edition of Passage: Why do those lucky people served by highways ministry ferries to islands such as Texada or in the Interior get to ride without the guilt trip that B.C. Ferries is always dumping on its users?

There are no posters on their ferries reminding them that the whole province is subsidizing their free ferry service.

Howcum, Charlie?

Victorians with a special interest in the capital city's historic houses now can do their heritage hunting from an armchair.

The city recently published This Old House, subtitled "an inventory of residential heritage" and it catalogues 424 dwellings considered to be of architectural or historic significance, of the more than 30,000 in Victoria.

It's seven years' work of city council's heritage advisory committee, a volunteer group of amateurs and experts who have met monthly since 1973, when the heritage movement got off the ground in Victoria.

More than 80 of the houses have been designated heritage by council, which protects them from major exterior alteration without permission. The rest are on the city's A and B lists of primary and supplementary heritage houses

The 124-page book is a bit pricey at $7.50 a copy, but consider it a bargain at less than two cents a house.

There is only one Crystal but now the name is everywhere.

Mayor Bill Tindall said he heard a report on the weekend about an Easter bonnet parade in the Crystal.

"I assumed they meant the Crystal Garden but I later discovered they were talking about the Crystal Ballroom in The Empress."

And husbands and wives are quarrelling because they agreed to meet at the Crystal and one waits among the exotic plants while the other fumes at the swimming pool.

Tindall said the city may have to consider renaming the pool if the confusion persists.

Still on the Crystal, the price tag is a healthy $40 a ticket for the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce dance on Saturday to help launch the new attraction.

But there's an explanation.

The event is in honor of Sam Bawlf, who saved the historic building, and the net proceeds will go to some community project.

Perhaps to pay for the tunnel to Vancouver?

City hall is losing two senior staff members this month.

Traffic engineer Derek Wild has resigned to become B.C. manager for Stanley Associates Engineering Ltd. based in Victoria.

Planner Deane Strongitharm, who dealt with heritage preservation issues and the Chinatown revitalization program, has left to take a planning post with the Islands Trust.

That's the provincial agency with responsibility for protecting the islands in Georgia Strait and Howe Sound from over-development.

Remember that marathon square dance Town Talk mentioned recently?

Well it took place over the weekend at Sidney's Sanscha Hall and of the 36 starters Saturday afternoon, 12 were still going 26 hours later.

Jim Dorman, president of the Curli-Q Square Dance Club, said $186 was collected through entry fees and refreshments and the foot-sore dancers will also collect between $600 and $1,000 in pledges.

The money will be used to help finance a trip to the Penticton Peach Festival in August.

Capital Regional District taxpayers shelled out $250,000 for a half-acre park on Wharf Street near the Johnson Street bridge but few are brave enough to use it.

When it was officially opened two weeks ago Reeson Park was too cold to enjoy — even for the official party.

And when the sun came out last week those taxpayers who went down to look at their new acquisition found it already taken over by Johnson Bridge regulars — drinking or sleeping it off.

The land for the park was donated by former city mayor Peter Pollen and developer Gordon Reeson, after whom the park was named, when Murray Glazier was chairman of the regional board.

Pollen and later Glazier envisioned the small park as a "window on the harbor" but so far the only ones who appear to be enjoying the view are not the ones paying the shot.

Body shops ask more

Insurance Corporation of B.C. payments don't allow auto body shops to show a reasonable profit, Ron Baldwin, general manager of the Automotive Retailers Association, said today.

"We're not happy with ICBC rates. Never have been, not since 1964," Baldwin said.

ICBC increased its hourly rate to body shops $2 to $25.50, and Baldwin said that's insufficient.

He said the $2 increase was requested by body shop operators last year.

"We view it as last year's increase," he said.

He pointed out that body shops using union labor don't yet know what they'll be paying for labor.

More than 400 mechanics, parts men, body men and drivers at 12 Vancouver-area car dealerships are taking a strike vote to back wage demands of a $2.50 increase on the current mechanic's hourly rate of $10.60. Ballots will be counted April 24.

Baldwin said as soon as a wage settlement is reached the body shops will have to go back to ICBC to negotiate higher rates.

But ICBC spokesman Bob Egby says the corporation pays what it considers to be a realistic rate and plans no further increases for 1980.

Hospitals get jittery over blood shortage

Victoria hospitals are being extra careful with their blood supplies these days — even postponing some surgery because of a shortage that developed over the long Easter weekend.

Dr. Garth Walther, director of pathology at Victoria General Hospital, said today elective surgery will be watched carefully to see how the blood supply holds and operations that require large transfusions may be rescheduled.

A Red Cross spokesman said Monday hospitals throughout B.C. and the Yukon face a critical shortage.

Stockpiles usually stand at about 600 pints, or two days' supply, but now are down to about half a day's supply, said Rick O'Brien.

VGH and Royal Jubilee Hospital report a shortage of type O positive blood but so far haven't had to make use of the Red Cross office's list of emergency donors.

Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage said blood clinics haven't been held for four days and that always depletes the supply. And holiday weekends often generate an increased need for blood because of traffic accidents.

The Red Cross continually operates just ahead of the need for blood, he said.

"We say blood can be stored for 21 days but the last time we saw blood around for 21 days — well I can't even remember," said Savage.

It takes several weeks for the Red Cross to restock after long weekends.

No clinics are planned in Victoria until next week, said Savage. But two will be held at productive locations — Belmont and Dunsmuir high schools.

All blood collected in the province is sent to the Red Cross laboratory in Vancouver for processing but a push is on for a lab to be opened here.

The provincial branch is awaiting word from the federal and provincial governments about funding for the project.

Meanwhile, the B.C.-Yukon Red Cross division, which includes the blood donor service, says for the fifth consecutive year it collected more than its fund-raising target.

The division collected $1,263,909. Its objective was $1,221,480.

Two men stranded with their snowmobile on a lake in Alaska were rescued early today — thanks to a Victoria Citizens' Band enthusiast.

The mission began about 8 p.m. Monday when Achim Lefevre of 3020 Freethy Place was talking to a contact in Australia. Lefevre said "skip conditions" in the atmosphere made it possible to reach that far.

During the conversation a May Day came through from Skelag Lake on Kodiak Island in Alaska.

Lefevre says he could only hear the May Day faintly but the Australian operator heard it clearly.

The call also was picked up by an operator in Florida.

Because he was the closest to Alaska, Lefevre swung into action.

He first phoned the U.S. Coast Guard in Port Angeles, which referred him back home to the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt.

At that point Lefevre thought the May Day came from a sinking boat.

A rescue spokesman said today the centre contacted the American coast guard and the Alaska State Troopers.

It turned out the distress signal had been sent by two snowmobilers who were stranded in the middle of the lake — unable to move because of the softening ice around them.

They were rescued by an Alaska State Troopers' helicopter.

City 'positive' in fire talks

The city of Victoria is looking in a "positive manner" at a proposal to take over fire protection services in Esquimalt, Ald. Bob Wright said Monday.

He said the move could be made within a year if a financial arrangement and other details can be worked out.

City council received a letter recently from Esquimalt formally asking Victoria to examine a takeover of fire services for the neighboring municipality.

Wright's fire prevention and emergency services committee decided last week to establish a subcommittee consisting of himself, Fire Chief Eric Simmons and senior city administrators.

This group will meet with Esquimalt to work out an agreement. Wright said his committee decided it would have to be on the same per capita cost basis as Victoria's fire department — just under $40.

That would make Esquimalt's fire protection bill about $600,000. Now it pays about $350,000. Esquimalt has a joint police-fire department in which police officers take special training in firefighting and get a pay supplement for the work.

The municipality is also able to call on the CFB Dockyard fire department for help.

A special committee of Esquimalt council has been examining alternatives because the municipality's policemen no longer want the dual responsibility of public safety and fire protection.

Wright said the city wants a sunset clause in any agreement with Esquimalt, in case the takeover doesn't work.

Other details to be negotiated include the hiring of extra men — with surplus Esquimalt personnel to be given preference — and the question of how they would fit into the Victoria department's seniority list.

Hard to beat Atlas quality.

The Atlas Mark I is a rugged, first line economical bias-ply tire. Its computer-designed wide 7-rib tread improves grip and traction. You get the safety of full 4-ply nylon construction and a soft, comfortable ride.

The Atlas Mark II gives you two tough fibreglass belts for greater mileage and better performance than bias-ply. Polyester sidewall plies improve riding comfort and eliminate flat spotting. It's an ideal popular-priced tire for the city commuter.

See your Esso dealer now.

Ask him for the right Atlas Mark I or Mark II tire for your car. If you're a saver, you'll take advantage of these savings at your participating Esso dealer while the sale lasts.

Radial buyers, see the new Atlas all-weather radial. Available now at regular prices from $64.01 or less.

*Regular prices quoted above are based on Atlas regular retail prices. Some Atlas retailers may have sold these tires for more or less than these prices prior to this "sale". Atlas tires are guaranteed by Imperial Oil Limited.

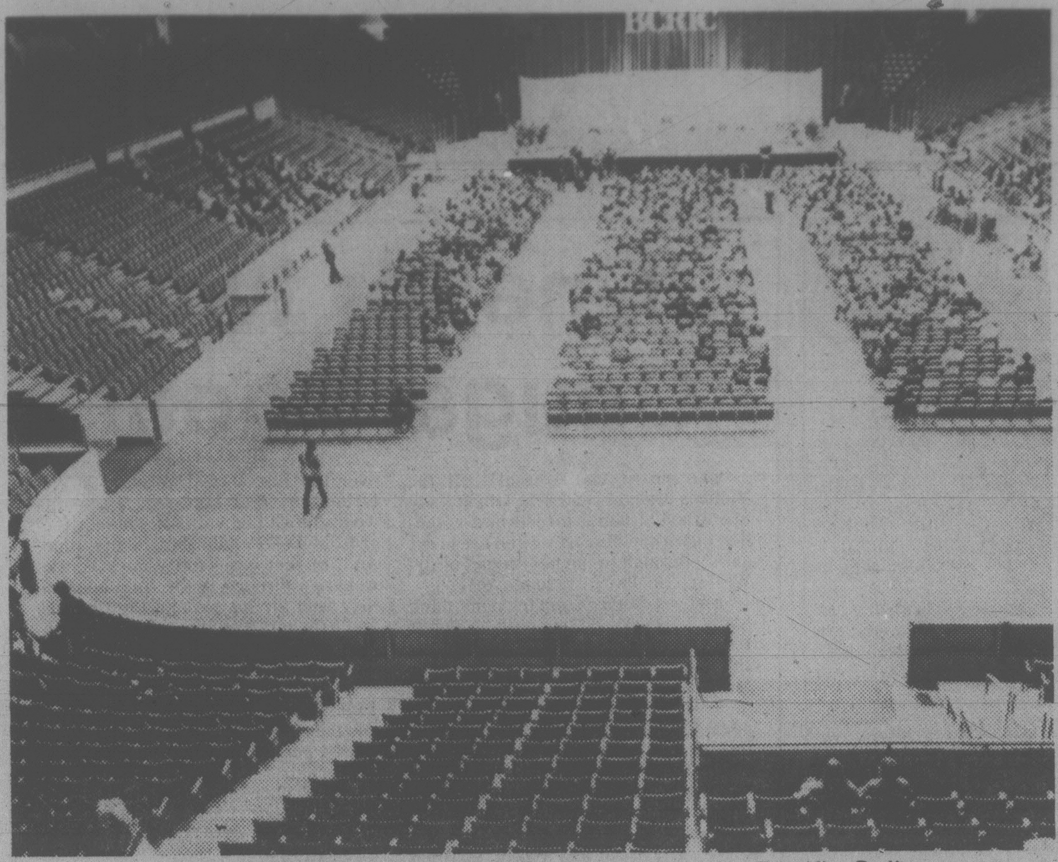
BCRIC chief defends early investment moves



Acres of seats were empty at BCRIC's meeting in the Pacific Coliseum

By DON RAMSDEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — When it was over, David Helliwell thanked the directors of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. for putting up with the show-like atmosphere of the company's first annual meeting Monday.

Helliwell, BCRIC president, spoke under glaring spotlights to the directors, who sat uncomfortably on a stage at one end of the 15,600-seat Pacific Coliseum.

The huge arena wasn't needed, however, as only 1,300 shareholders took the time to hear Helliwell reaffirm the corporation's goal of becoming an aggressive company, creating wealth and jobs.

The company, formed in 1978 as a holding firm for corporations taken over by the provincial government, had received 3,800 requests for tickets to the meeting and anticipated a turnout of more than 4,000. The number of requests prompted Helliwell to hold the event at the Coliseum, at a cost of $15,000.

During his remarks to the shareholders, Helliwell defended the company's recent purchase of 14 per cent of the shares of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., the B.C.-based forestry giant, and an option taken on 25 per cent of the shares of Kaiser Resources Ltd.

There had been criticism that the moves meant BCRIC was to become no more than a holding firm.

That dissatisfaction was illustrated shortly after the moves when the value of BCRIC shares on the Vancouver Stock Exchange soared briefly to more than $9 but then fell to about $7.

"We do not intend to become a holding company or an investment company as holding companies, by themselves, do not create wealth or jobs," Helliwell said.

"While initial investment moves by BCRIC may not always mirror our operating strategy, you can rest assured it is our driving force and subsequent action should bear this out.

"We want to become an economic force in our own right and I only ask that you do not judge our progress on a step-by-step basis, but be prepared to take a long-term point of view."

Helliwell also explained why BCRIC paid $35 a share for 2.8 million MacBlo shares held by Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. when the same number of shares could have been bought at a lower price in the open market.

"We believed that the CPI-held block . . . would be acquired by someone else who might regard themselves, by virtue of having that block, entitled to a competing voice in MacMillan Bloedel affairs," he said.

The company was incorporated by the Social Credit government in February, 1978, with $151-million worth of holdings that included pulp mills, sawmills, an interest in Westcoast Transmission Ltd. and oil and gas exploration rights to about 2.3 million acres of land in northern B.C.

More than $487 million was poured into the company by the sale of common shares last year.

Helliwell said the corporation does not expect to pay dividends within the next three years.

To protect the consumer, food advertisers are prohibited from putting medical endorsements in their ads. But your doctor will tell you that there are specific products which he recommends as part of a sensible diet.

The medical profession has conducted extensive research on the effects of diet in the prevention of heart disease. As a result, more and more doctors are encouraging their patients to develop a preventive program of fresh air and exercise and to make a number of changes in their eating habits. Since tests show that consumption of foods that are high in saturated fats tends to increase the risk of cardiovascular disorders*, doctors recommend limiting the intake of saturates; and substituting polyunsaturated for saturated fats wherever possible.

That's why products made from corn oil are often a part of dietary recommendations. Corn oil is high in polyunsaturates and low in saturates. And that's important to people who have been advised to eat carefully.

Fleischmann's margarine is made from 100% pure corn oil. It's pure corn oil that gives Fleischmann's the delicious flavour that so many people enjoy. That's what makes it Canada's leading health margarine . . . and an important part of a healthful diet.

No single product can ensure good health. A healthy life depends on an all-round program that includes plenty of fresh air, exercise and a well-balanced diet of sensible foods, like Fleischmann's.

The Stanley Cup stake: Habs 9-5 and beat 'em

Sure, it's crazy, the new National Hockey League season just beginning and running another eight weeks. But that's the way it is, 80 regular-season games later, with 16 of the 21 teams still alive for the first of the mini-playoff series that will separate some of the men from the boys.

And those "magic 16" include the oft-maligned Vancouver Canucks, winners of not much — only 27 games all year — but now 15th best and counting Buffalo Sabres as possibly their next victims.

Well, if not counting, at least thinking about it, because the Sabres aren't about to give way easily. After all, Scotty Bowman's new club is one of the hottest teams in the NHL going into the playdowns and is second best to Philadelphia Flyers over-all.

That statistic is somewhat more impressive when it is realized that the Sabres are undefeated in their last 14 games. This is a late-season record bettered only by Montreal Canadiens, who are unbeaten in 21. The Sabres also are Vezina Trophy holders, an award given to the top goalkeeping combination but usually associated with a fine team defensive performance and which is the Bowman trademark.

So the Sabres are tough. But wait! The Canucks have more men than boys aboard this time around and that may help in that term defined "experience". Among the newcomers who've been there are Dave "Tiger" Williams, with 44 games in the playoffs; Jerry Butler 41, Ivan Boldirev and Darcy Rota 50 between them; while Dave Logan, Kevin McCarthy and John Hughes have been through the mill to a lesser extent.

So it's not a great lot in the world of stars that is the NHL galaxy today, but add 'em up, its a plus and the whole bunch together should help.

Besides, the Canucks took nine of the last 10 points they needed to get where they are. So who knows?

Otherwise, the Canadiens, as defending champions, must rate. It's still beat 'em for all of it in the final reckoning. Coach Claude Ruel must be given top marks for turning things around after the early-season disaster of Boom Boom Geoffrion. Ruel took over on Dec. 13 and, after a shaky start, the Canadiens finally hit their true stride and now are red-hot as Boston Bruins must know after failing their character test Saturday.

And good news for Montreal fans too was the announcement that Ruel, who said earlier he would not return as coach next year, now says he has had second thoughts and may return. "It's 80 or 90 per cent certain", he said. "It depends on my health."

His vision is lessening in an eye that was injured when he was a junior, it is bothering him, and he will ask for medical advice before making his final decision.

And if you're an odds man, the morning line for the Stanley Cup stakes figures something like this:

Montreal 9-5, Philadelphia 5-2, Buffalo and Boston 9-2 and New York Islanders (also on an unbeaten streak and maybe at their peak now) at 5-1.

Those are the favored ones. Canucks, Oilers and Whalers are on the other end of the scale at 60-1. Remember, you read it here first, but use your money, not mine.

Meanwhile, Vancouver Whitecaps, who won the North American Soccer League championship last season, are back in the normal Vancouver position of "whipping boys" following their second straight loss Saturday. Soccer isn't a game where you blow a 2-0 lead, not often anyway, definitely not if you're champions and especially as the 'Caps didn't look that great doing it either.

Oh well, all is not lost. Our basketball cousins, the Seattle SuperSonics won, handily and impressively in their series finale when they wore their NBA championship laurels proudly. But they weren't that haughty in an earlier game in Portland. In that one, the Sonics were made to look very ordinary and were made to look that way by an exciting rookie, Billy Rae Bates. The answer: the game film, an extraordinary closed-door workout between games, a much tougher defence and the Blazers and Bates were blown out.

(And hey, guys, it looks like TV suppers every night of the week.)

One for two Cougars goal

One out of two — that's all the Victoria Cougars need to win if they are to avoid being forced into a sudden-death deciding game and are to get safely through to the next round of the Western Hockey League playoffs.

And, as far as Cougar coach Jack Shupe is concerned, it would be best if the Cats could win the first one, against Portland Winter Hawks at 8 tonight at Memorial Arena.

A win tonight is all the Cougars need to be sure of a playoff berth but the league-champion Winter Hawks are flying high after beating the Cats Saturday and downing Seattle Breakers 5-2 Monday night.

Should the Winter Hawks win tonight, the Cougars could still go through with a win Thursday night over the Breakers. However, if Victoria loses that one, too, all teams would finish tied with 4-4 win-loss records in the round-robin competition. And, in that case, the Winter Hawks would go through to the final because they won the league and the Cougars and Breakers would meet in a sudden-death game.

The Winter Hawks led 3-1 after the first period Monday night after Tim Tookey tied things up at 1-1 and then John Multan and Jim Benning scored goals 37 seconds apart late in the period.

Ed Cooper and Ken Yaremchuk got the other Portland goals while Tom Stanger and Brian Graves scored for Seattle.

(Summary on page 13)

Olympic role for Whalers

Hartford Whalers have been presented with the proposition that, to eliminate Montreal Canadiens in the first round of Stanley Cup playoffs, they'll have to pull an upset similar to that by the U.S. Olympic hockey team.

A group of U.S. college kids won the Olympic gold at Lake Placid, N.Y., in February, humbling the favored Russians along the way. The Whalers have been cast in the same underdog role as they open their playoff against the Canadiens in the Montreal Forum tonight.

"Someone said something about the Olympic team beating the Russians," Whalers' coach Don Blackburn said Monday. "But they only had to do it once. We've got to beat Montreal three times."

The Whalers and the Canadiens played four times during the regular season, with Montreal winning once in Hartford and the other three games resulting in ties.

But that was the regular season. In the playoffs, the Canadiens are nearly unbeatable. They're shooting for a fifth consecutive Stanley Cup to match the accomplishment of the 1956-1960 Canadiens teams.

Blackburn had some unique strategy mapped out.

"The key to stopping Montreal is to tell them that the first game is Wednesday."

Irving Grundman, Montreal's executive vice-president and managing director, said he's optimistic the Canadiens will retain the Stanley Cup.

"All in all, this team is probably as strong as last year's."

In the first games of other preliminary-round, best-of-five series tonight, Vancouver Canucks meet the Sabres in Buffalo, Toronto Maple Leafs travel to Minnesota to play the North Stars, St. Louis Blues visit Chicago Black Hawks, Edmonton Oilers play the Flyers in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh Penguins clash with the Bruins in Boston, Los Angeles Kings go against New York Islanders and Atlanta Flames face New York Rangers.

Second games in each series are Wednesday, with the exception of the Boston-Pittsburgh series which resumes Thursday.

In Buffalo, Scotty Bowman, who coached the Canadiens to the last four NHL titles, put some defence into a powerful offensive team and coached it to second place over all.

"My most satisfying season," he sums up. "I've never been more proud."

Vancouver Canucks know they face a challenge.

"We realize we're up against a pretty good hockey team," said coach Harry Neale. "But we''re playing well right now, too.

" Their defence is moving the puck quickly to speedy forwards, so it will be dificult to forecheck them. And that's what you'd like to do against them."

The Leafs, who had the worst goals against record in the league this season, must turn to checking to stand a chance against the North Stars.

"There's no big secret about what we have to do to win this series," said assistant coach Joe Crozier. "We have to start playing defensive hockey the way we're capable of playing it."

Centre Darryl Sittler agreed that the offensive power of the North Stars, a young team that does not have much playoff experience, might best be countered with a tight checking game.

"We have to watch Bobby Smith's line (with wingers Al MacAdam and Steve Payne) very closely because that's one of the very best lines in the NHL now."

Philadelphia set an NHL record with a 35-game unbeaten streak earlier in the season, won the league's over-all title for the regular season, and led the NHL in 13 categories. Now, the Flyers face an Edmonton club that gained the 16th and final playoff berth on the next-to-last day of the season.

"They have achieved more than was expected of them," Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn said of the Oilers. "The playoff is their cake and now they can cream it up a little. If they don't, they have their cake anyway."

The Oilers' high-powered offence is led by centre Wayne Gretzky, 19, who finished second to Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles in the scoring race with 51 goals, 86 assists for 137 points. Dionne had the same number of points, but took the title because he scored two more goals.

The Pittsburgh-Boston series is the only replay of one of last year's playoff matchups, when the Bruins swept the Penguins in four games during the quarter-finals. The teams split four meetings during the regular season.

No change evident in baseball hassle

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Miller isn't optimistic about the baseball contract talks.

"We haven't discussed anything substantial since I don't know when," says the executive director of the Major League Players' Association.

Miller hoped things were better today when he met with club owners negotiators and a federal mediator in the talks over a new basic agreement.

They hope to avert a players strike set for May 23.

"The mediator is still in the picture," said Miller about Kenneth Moffett, who joined the talks two sessions ago in Palm Springs, Calif. "These meetings are under the auspices of the federal mediation service. Last week, both parties (owners and players) agreed to more meetings — and that's where we stand."

Talks were recessed last Thursday when negotiators agreed to a timetable for seven more meetings during the next three weeks. The first two of the meetings were scheduled for today and Thursday.

The players and owners still present hard-line positions on several issues, including free agent compensation.

Management, represented by the Major League Player Relations Committee, wants a player rather than a draft choice as compensation for a team which loses a player as a free agent. Players have resisted the proposal, saying it would restrict their movement from one team to another and reduce the value of the free agent marketplace.

"There's a job to be done," said Miller. "The players' association is willing and able to complete the job. We have to see whether the owners are in a similar frame of mind."

Jays visiting Mariners as majors set to open

SEATTLE (CP) — Toronto Blue Jays begin their fourth major league baseball season Wednesday night by visiting Seattle Mariners with high hopes that, by the close of the season, they can look at their loss column and see just two digits instead of the annual three.

The Jays may get help in staying under 100 losses should the player strike take place May 23 as scheduled. But, for the moment, they start the long battle for last place in the American League East Division on their own merit.

Right-hander Dave Lemanczyk will start on the mound for Toronto against Seattle right-hander Mike Parrott.

Lemanczyk won eight and lost 10 last season but was hampered by a lower back inflamation after winning seven of his first 10 starts. Parrott was 14-12 for the Mariners.

As part of the opening ceremony, Winter Olympic skiing silver medallist Phil Mahre, a native of White Pass, Wash., will toss out the first ball.

Atlanta Braves visit Cincinnati Reds in the other season opener Wednesday afternoon with the Braves' Phil Neikro (21-20) going against Tom Seaver (16-6).

Vancouver golfer takes Moroccan golf title

RABAT, Morocco (CP) — Richard Zokol of Vancouver won the international amateur golf championship of Morocco on Monday, finishing with a three-round total of 222, three over par.

He was one shot ahead of George Riter of West Germany and two ahead of Makronne of Morocco.

In two-man team play, Makronne and his partner, Gartite, finished first with 459 with Zokol and Graham Cook of Montreal second at 461.

Tonight in sports

Hockey is the only game in town — both live and on television — tonight.

Victoria Cougars tackle Portland Winter Hawks in a Western Division playoff in the Western League at 8 in Memorial Arena.

And, on television, Buffalo Sabres and Vancouver Canucks face off in the first round of the National League's Stanley Cup playoffs at 5 on Channels 2 and 6.

Burden on the Rangers in New York scenario

By DAVE ANDERSON
.c. 1980 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Now that the Islanders and the Rangers have skated to overture music for six months, the first act of their Stanley Cup scenarios begins tonight in a best three-of-five series — the Islanders against the Los Angeles Kings at Nassau Coliseum, the Rangers against the Atlanta Flames at Madison Square Garden.

In recent years, the Stanley Cup burden was always on the Islanders but this time the burden is on the Rangers to show that their theatrics of last spring were not a fluke. When the Rangers ambushed the Islanders in six games in the semi-finals, they lifted hockey's popularity in New York to an unprecedented level. Even losing to the Montreal Canadiens in five games in the Stanley Cup final did not diminish what the Rangers had accomplished.

Now the Rangers have that reputation to uphold. That's why the Garden's impresario, Sonny Werblin, addressed them last Friday at practice.

"Werblin told us it was time to get our act together," says John Davidson, the Rangers goaltender. "He reminded us that we had something going last year and let's get it going again this year. I think the best thing his presence did was bring everybody together when we have to be together — going into the playoffs."

John Davidson, whose acrobatics carried the Rangers into the Cup final last year, believes the Rangers have a better team now than they did at this time last year.

"We've got to believe we're better, we've got the big guy back there on defense," he said, alluding to Barry Beck, "and we've got Ulfie Nilsson healthy."

Even with Beck and Nilsson, however, the Rangers must discover how to snuff out the Flames, perhaps their most consistent tormentor. In the Garden, the Rangers have not defeated the Flames since March 30, 1977, a span of eight games — seven losses and one tie, including a loss and a tie this season.

"The big thing is, the Flames believe they're going to beat us," John Davidson says, "but you can destroy that feeling quickly by getting the jump on them."

To do that, however, John Davidson must be the goaltender he was in last year's playoffs. Sometimes a few spectacular saves can recreate the confidence a goaltender needs in the play-offs. But if the Rangers win in five games, the format of five games in seven nights, including back-to-back games twice, could weary him for the next round; then again, psychologically, it could lift him to last year's level.

For the Rangers, a plus factor this year could be the presence of three bigger, tougher players than last year — Barry Beck, Cam Connor and Ed Hospodar.

"Knowing Fred Shero," said Bill Torre, the Islanders' general manager, of the Ranger's coach, "I think he might go to a more physical game in the playoffs."

The Islanders, a distant fifth in the over-all National Hockey League standings, have returned to their most comfortable role — that of an underdog. With their 2-1 victory Saturday night over the Rangers, they finished their season undefeated in their last 12 games — eight victories, four ties. Now that Denis Potvin has returned from the thumb injury that kept him out for three months, the Islanders are as good as any of the obvious Stanley Cup contenders — Philadelphia, Montreal, Buffalo and Boston — in a year without an obvious favorite. Unlike last year, when they finished atop the NHL's regular season standings, the Islanders are not expected to win.

"And that," says Glenn (Chico) Resch, the Islanders goaltender, "is when we've always done well in the playoffs."

Now in the playoffs for the sixth straight year, the still-young Islanders might be ready to win the Cup, just as the Dallas Cowboys finally won the Super Bowl in their sixth year in the National Football League play-offs.

"Against the Rangers last year, we withdrew instead of getting noisy," Chico Resch says. "I think we've come out of our shell. Between periods now, the guys are standing up and laying it on the line."

In other years, the Islanders' opponents were able to concentrate on stopping their big line of Bryan Trottier, Mike Bossy and Clark Gillies, knowing that the Islanders' other lines were not that explosive. Now the Islanders have Butch Goring, the center obtained from the Kings last month, although Anders Kallur, the rookie wing with 19 goals, has been lost with a damaged shoulder. But the Islanders have not lost in 12 games since obtaining Goring in exchange for Billy Harris and Dave Lewis following the arrival of the Olympic defenseman, Ken Morrow, enabled the Islanders to make that deal.

"The way Morrow played," says Bill Torre, "made it possible for us to trade Lewis."

And now Morrow, only five weeks after the United States Olympic hockey miracle at Lake Placid, will be in the Stanley Cup playoffs. On another underdog too.

Their "man" in this case was unidentified Welsh player (whose teammate at right is trying to add a little help) from Penygraig Club near Cardiff which beat Castaways 10-4. Welshmen also won game between club's second teams 21-6 and play Oak Bay Wanderers Thursday at 5 p.m. at Windsor Park before leaving Island.

Piniella back with Yanks after recognizing 'duty'

Times News Services

Outfielder Lou Piniella returned to New York Yankees' training camp in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Monday and apologized to Manager Dick Howser for walking out of an intra-squad game Sunday.

Piniella was one of the few Yankees who did not attend workouts after the Major League Players Association called for a strike of exhibition games. On Sunday, the Yankees had scheduled an intra-squad game and Howser said he told Piniella that if he did not want to play he should go home.

After his return, Piniella explained: "I felt that if the decision was made that we were on strike, then we're on strike.

"I wanted to abide by it, but then when I saw most of my team-mates working out, I felt that it was my duty to come back."

In Miami, Scott McGregor, one of Baltimore Orioles' starting pitchers, is back in Baltimore today to undergo medical tests on a sore left elbow which most likely will keep him out of Sunday's game with Chicago.

"Scotty will probably throw (on the sidelines) Friday in Chicago but it doesn't look good for Sunday," said manager Earl Weaver.

McGregor, bothered by the same problem last season, made the decision Monday morning.

"My elbow was too tender for me to throw and I just want the doctor to check it out and see if he can find out what the cause is," said McGregor.

Bill Atkinson, a pitcher from Chatham, Ont., has been sent to the minors by Chicago White Sox.

Atkinson, 25, who was acquired in a cash deal from Montreal Expos last winter, will join Iowa of the American Association.

Atkinson was signed by Montreal in 1971 when he was 17. He pitched his first major league game in 1977 for the Expos, who used him as a relief pitcher.

He pitched 13 2-3 innings for the White Sox during spring training, allowing one earned run.

Elsewhere in the world of baseball, Vancouver native Dave McKay has signed a one-year contract with Oakland A's and will be with the team when it opens its season at home against Minnesota Twins.

Oakland manager Billy Martin said McKay will play a utility role with the A's, at least at the start of the season.

McKay was an original member of Toronto Blue Jays, playing third base and second base until released last December after refusing to go to Syracuse Chiefs, the Jays' International League farm club.

And, Detroit manager Sparky Anderson admits the Tigers have a lot of question marks, but he's guardedly optimistic about the club's chances this season.

"I think everybody understands me now and they understand what to expect of spring training," he said after an intra-squad game played in a drizzle.

Anderson said his biggest concern now, as it was at the end of last season, is pitching.

"You know, we had a 4.27 earned run average last year," he said. "I've got to be concerned about that. But that's the only thing. I'm not concerned about anything else."

The Tiger manager said he believes the team ERA must be 3.80 or less if Detroit is to have a chance.

Kerry Park tops bantam puck title

Kerry Park of Mill Bay got three goals from Brad Odegaard and beat North Surrey 7-4 Monday night to win the Juan de Fuca bantam rep "A" hockey tournament championship.

Odegaard also picked up an assist and John Storbbe assisted on four of the goals.

Kerry Park won five of its seven games in preliminary round-robin play to reach the final. North Surrey also won five games and Juan de Fucan finished third with a 4-1-2 record.

New Westminster was next at 4-3 followed by North Delta with 3-1-3, Comox with 3-4, South Delta on 2-5 and Port Alberni at 1-6.

Locatelli, Cuppage win golf

Mixed club combinations proved to be the best in the annual Easter Invitational tournament at Uplands Golf Club.

Southpaw Carl Locatelli of the host club teamed up with Colwood's Ed Cuppage to compile 121.4 points, based on the Stableford scoring system for two-man teams, and capture top honors.

Winners of the low gross were Rick Fortunato of Vancouver's Marine Drive and Sandy Harper of Nanaimo, scoring 137.

Low net runnersup were Ron Roberts and Ken Keating, both of Uplands, with 121.2.

At least 30 of the higher handicapped players hoping to compete in the annual Vancouver Island Open match-play championship are doomed to disappointment.

Preference to the lower handicaps had to be shown again Monday when the District Committee set up the draw for next Sunday's qualifying round at Gorge Vale.

The field is restricted to 120 but more than 150 entries were received.

John Zeligney, a visitor from Vancouver Fraserview, has to be impressed with the par-three holes at Victoria Golf Club.

A 19-handicapper, his net scores on the first four par-threes last week were 2-0-2-1. Zeligney came up with pars on the second and ninth, threw in a hole-in-one on the eighth and managed a birdie on the 13th.

Other hole-in-one celebrants in recent days included fireman Gordie Jones, getting his third on Gorge Vale's 14th Monday afternoon; Bob Gale, on Oak Bay's 14th; Uplands' member Gord Ross, on the second at Marine Drive, and auctioneer Frank Kilshaw, on Uplands' fourth Sunday.

Doctors Garth Walther, Stu Bland and Val Conolly teamed up with lawyer Alan Bigelow, a doctor's brother, to win the Challoner-Mitchell Trophy at Oak Bay. They combined for a sizzling, 20-under-par 51 to win an event that got its start in 1912.

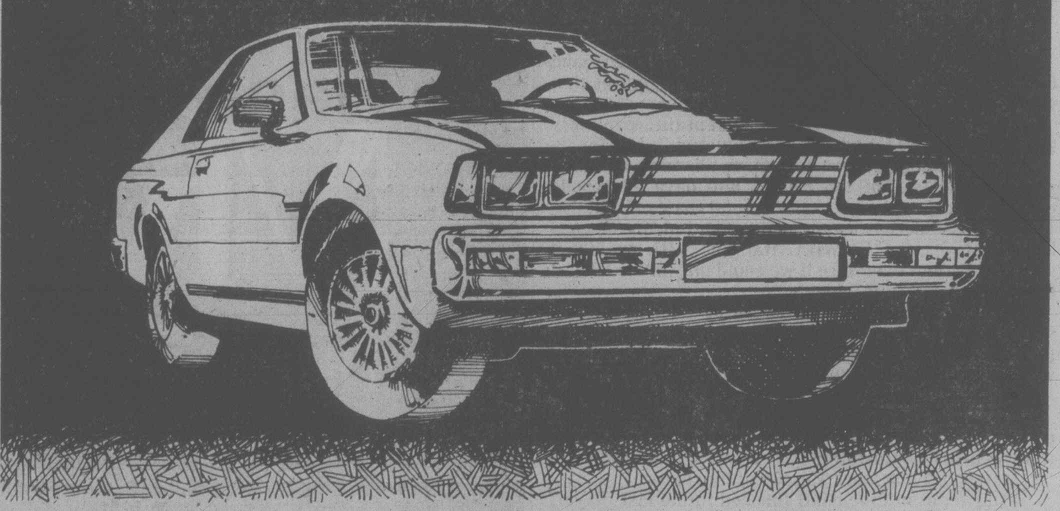
SERVICE AT FIRESTONE MEANS MORE THAN JUST FAIR PRICES.



No one wants to spend more than they have to for automotive service. That's why you shop around and compare prices.

But service at Firestone means more. It means qualified mechanics who take the time to explain what your car needs and why. It means national brand name parts you can trust—like Champion, Moog and Monroe.

So you see, Firestone service means more than fair prices...it's great value too.

ALIGNMENT SHOULD BE INSPECTED EVERY 12,000 km
No Extra Charge for cars with air-conditioning or torsion bar adjustment. Correct caster-camber, set toe-in, toe-out, adjust steering box, and "centre" the steering wheel.

The light beer that doesn't give up on taste.

Specially good with almost any meal. Less than 99 calories per bottle makes Special Lite less filling. Refreshing, real Canadian beer taste makes it really food for thought. Next time....try the Special.

The Edmonton Journal

A toast, gentlemen, to the WHA

Got your glass filled, Harold Ballard? How about you Jacques Courtois of Molson's Breweries and the Montreal Canadiens? And, you Frank Griffiths, owner of the Vancouver Canucks? And all you short-sighted American owners too?

Okay, gentlemen. A toast.

"To the World Hockey Association! It really was a major league!"

They should be forced to write that line 100 times each on their scoreboards during the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The first year after merger is now complete. And conclusions are inescapable. The World Hockey Association emerged completely victorious.

Not only did two survivors of the incredible merger-pillage still have enough left to make the playoffs, the young WHA stars that the NHL "experts spent the entire off-season belittling were tremendous successes.

And success exhibit No. 1-A, of course, was Wayne Gretzky. At 19 years of age, he ended up tied with Marcel Dionne in points, losing the scoring championship because of his unselfishness (goals settle ties and Dionne had two more goals.) History will record Gretzky scored 51 goals and ended up with 137 points in his first year in the NHL with a full year of junior hockey eligibility remaining.

One-hundred and 37 points. That's exactly 27 points more than he scored in the WHA last year. And exactly 42 more than a first-year NHL player has ever scored in the 53-year history of the NHL. Gretzky has a 50-50 chance of winning the Hart Trophy as the most valuable player in the league and probably about 40 per cent shot at the Lady Byng. Being the chapter chairman of the Professional Hockey Writers Association, I can assure you he received my votes in those two categoreis and I refused to vote for the Calder Trophy because Gretzky was not eligible. I know several other chapter chairmen around the circuit who are doing the same thing when it comes to the Calder.

But let's go beyond that. Five of the top 12 scorers in the NHL this year came live and direct from the WHA.

Former Oiler Mike Rogers, who finished tied with Charlie Simmer for sixth in the scoring race, had 42 goals and 59 assists. Rogers' Hartford team-mate Blaine Stoughton ended up tied with Simmer and Buffalo's Danny Gare for the league-lead in goals (56) and had 97 points for ninth place. Kent Nilsson, the former Winnipeg Jet, produced 40 goals and 93 points for Atlanta and Oilers' Blair MacDonald, who at least one NHL scout said wouldn't be able to score in the NHL, scored 46 times and finished 10th in the race with 94 points.

The two WHAers from Winnipeg, Terry Ruskowski and Rich Preston added heart to the Chicago Black Hawks and restored that club to the upper echelon of the league.

Goaltender Mike Liut was the MVP in St. Louis.

And attendance was up just about everywhere and four new 'WHA' clubs had home attendance figures that were the envy of a great many established teams.

MacDonald, Oilers' interim captain, probably summed it up best for the WHA "graduating" class.

"I think we proved a few things. I think the final statistics and all the other facts will have everybody convinced that our league wasn't a total write-off, eh?"

"It was a decent league and we had plenty of good hockey players in the WHA. Half the NHL people, it seemed, weren't even sure if we could play in the NHL. I think we proved we're capable.

And for those of us who played in it for five or six years, well, we have to be delighted with everything. I say that because it's a nice feeling today to know we weren't wasting our time all those years in the WHA."

Rogers agrees.

"We had something to prove this year," said the player who was lost to Hartford for Wayne Carleton in the worst deal in Oiler history.

Listen to young Mark Messier of the Oilers:

"Our team in Cincinnati finished in the last playoff spot in the WHA last year yet there were 15 guys from our team playing the NHL this year. So how bad was our team?"

Oiler owner Peter Pocklington says if they weren't 'robbed', all former WHA clubs would have made the playoffs with ease.

"I think that's obvious," he said.

"And if we weren't raped and if we'd had Ron Low in goal all season, I think the Oilers would be opening the playoffs at home. I think we would have made the top eight. Look at the statistics. We were the eighth-highest in team scoring. We scored 301 goals. We were second-last in goals against with 322. But if we'd had some defencemen ... Imagine how much better this team would have been with Paul Shmyr, Dave Langevin and John Hughes."

You could go on and on, making point after point.

But really, it's an open and shut case.

The World Hockey Association, alias "that minor league" ought to be toasted today.

The National Hockey League is a great deal richer because of the WHA stars and its survivors.

EATING HIS WORDS is Edmonton Journal sports columnist Terry Jones who promised he would eat a Feb.25 column critical of the Oilers if team made the Stanley Cup playoffs. (See column).

Ankle injury troubles Ball

VANCOUVER (CP) — A badly-cut ankle has made midfield general Alan Ball a doubtful starter for Vancouver Whitecaps' North American Soccer League game here Saturday night against Seattle Sounders.

"Very, very sore," was Ball's assessment Monday of the 10-stitch injury suffered Saturday night in a 3-2 overtime loss to the Sockers in San Diego.

Without Ball, the winless 'Caps will likely go to Paul Nelson, a 21-year-old Burnaby native, in the midfield. Nelson was working in that position Monday in practice and in a 4-1 victory by the Whitecaps Reserves over the B.C. under-18 squad.

Without Ball in the line-up, Steve Kember will probably take over the playmaking role in the midfield. Carl Valentine will operate between the midfield and forward on the right side and Nelson would be on the left.

Kenyan repeats in Safari Rally

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Kenya millionaire Shekhar Mehta won the Safari Rally for a record-tying third time Monday, nursing his Datsun 160J over rough roads that tore apart the Mercedes challengers.

Mehta survived a rash of flat tires and minor steering troubles to take the 28th Safari by a big margin, in front of some of the world's top international drivers.

Rauno Aaltonen of Finland, also in a Datsun, finished second and Vic Preston Jr., son of a Nairobi gasoline station operator, was third in a Mercedes 450SLC.

Rally spokesmen said an hour after the first cars reached the finish line that they still were computing point totals. But they said there was no doubt about the order of the three leading cars.

The Safari, four days of mountain and desert trails, mud and choking dust, menacing wild animals and hostile, stone-throwing tribesmen, is widely considered the world's toughest cross-country motoring test.

Competitors said this year's Safari was one of the driest in memory, and, because there was no rain to soften the roads, one of the most bone-shaking.

Woman makes racing history

BRANDS HATCH, England (Reuter) — South African Desire Wilson made motor racing history Monday when she became the first woman to win a Formula 1 race.

She drove her Wolf WR 4 to victory in the second round of the British national Formula 1 championship at an average speed of 183.33 kilometres an hour.

Myth:
The best-selling small car in Canada is an import.

Fact:
This GM World Car is North American built and Canada's No. 1 small car.*

Chevette and Acadian out-sell all other cars in their class. $4,678 is the price of popularity.

Is this GM World Car No. 1 because its base price for a Chevette Scooter and Acadian 'S' beats the leading import hatchbacks, Honda, Toyota and Datsun, and is $2,167 less than the cheapest VW Rabbit?

Or is it because its fuel-economy rating† can not be beaten by any other North American-built car with a gasoline engine, including VW Rabbit?

We think it's because of all-around value.

All Chevettes and Acadians are four-passenger hatchbacks with comfortable full-foam seats, cut-pile carpeting, radial tires, rack-and-pinion steering, a maintenance-free battery, electronic ignition, an eager overhead-cam 1.6 litre 4-cylinder engine and 4-speed manual transmission. Plus extensive corrosion-resistance protection.

It all adds up. There are also 2- and 4-door Chevette and Acadian models available with a more extended list of standard features including an AM radio, reclining bucket seats, bodyside moulding, white-stripe radial tires and much more.

Drive one. Discover a small car that is smooth and quiet, has plenty of get up and go, and makes you feel good driving around town or heading down the highway.

Versions of these cars are sold on six continents. They are part of a continuing General Motors program to develop cars for a fuel-conscious world. It is this concept that helps explain the quality of Canada's best-selling small cars. Their popularity is proven.

This GM World Car is built to keep its good looks, with parts and service readily available at nearly 7,000 dealers across North America (over 1,000 in Canada), and, unlike the top four imports, it offers an optional Continuous Protection Plan. Ask your dealer for details. Whether you're buying or leasing, test drive one soon. Chevette at Chevy dealers, Acadian at Pontiac dealers.

Peace was restored only after police were called in from neighboring communities to assist local law enforcement officers. (AP Wirephoto).

Canada's wrestlers find gold

(CP) — Canadian Greco-Roman wrestlers won two gold medals and knocked off some of the top competitors in the world at the United States senior championships in Mount Pleasant, Mich., during the weekend.

Louis Santerre of Montreal pinned six of seven opponents to take his gold while fellow Montrealer Doug Yates won all his matches for his medal.

Gary Kallos, also of Montreal, won four of six matches to finish fourth in his category.

The United States is ranked first in the world in both freestyle and Greco-Roman.

Greco-Roman is a classical style which doesn't allow the use of legs. If an wrestler is thrown to the mat he must be pinned immediately or he is allowed to regain his feet.

All three performers are seeking Olympic berths and will compete at the Canadian trials June 15-16 in London, Ont.

Pioneers of the sport canoeists eye medals

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's canoeists, scuttled in other Olympiads, plan to make waves in Moscow this summer and hope to cruise home with some medals, says coach Ross Bales.

"We're back to the point where we think we can knock off the best and even win some medals," Bales said in an interview.

"And we'd like to think all our crews will make the finals."

Canada pioneered the sport in the '30s and won medals regularly until the early '50s when the Eastern European nations flexed their muscles.

Since then, the only Canadian to make a ripple in Olympic competitions was John Wood of Toronto; he won a silver medal in Montreal in 1976.

What makes Bales optimistic about 1980 are results from the 1979 world championships in Duisberg, West Germany.

Sue Holloway of Ottawa, coached by Bales, finished fifth in the women's 500-metre kayak event. Lucy Guay and Karen Lukanovich of Montreal were sixth in the women's double competition.

"Sue was 0.77 seconds behind the bronze in a two-minute event. And that's the best performance by a Canadian woman ever," Bales said.

Holloway has steadily improved over the years from a third-place finish as a junior in 1973, eighth-place in Montreal in the women's double event to her fine performance in West Germany.

Holloway, Guay and Lukanovich will be vying with Elizabeth and Tina Arnold of Ottawa, Barb Almstead of North Bay, Ont., and Liz McGowan of Montreal for four Olympic spots. The trials will be held at the Olympic basin in Montreal May 24-25, May 30-June 1 and June 14-15.

There are 13 places for men including eight kayak and five canoe. While the women compete only at the 500-metre distance, the men paddle 500-, 1,000- and 10,000-metre courses.

While their results in 1979 were disappointing, some crew-members stand a chance of making the Olympic finals, Bales said.

Denis Barre of Quebec City and Hugh Fisher of Montreal finished sixth in the two-man 1,000-metre kayak event in West Germany. They were the only kayak team to make the finals.

In the canoe events, three crews hit the finals.

Greg Smith of Toronto was seventh in the 500-metre race, Steve Botting and Norm Behrens of Montreal were also seventh in the two-man 500-metre, while Martin Fraser and Ivan Charalambij of Ottawa placed ninth in the two-man, 1,000-metre event.

They, along with Dean, Scott and Reid Oldershaw of Toronto, Alwyn Morris of Caughnawaga, Que., Steve King and Phil Hepburn of Montreal and Alvin and Donnie Brier from Dartmouth, N.S., will be fighting for berths on the team headed for Moscow.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Wanted: A dry soccer stadium.

That's what San Jose Earthquakes of the North American Soccer League are in the market for after their current home, Spartan Stadium, was flooded with 1.5 million gallons of water.

The flood, caused either by vandalism or a broken pipe during the weekend, has forced postponement of Saturday's home opener against Edmonton Drillers.

City Brake retains title

No Chance collected "A" event fivepin laurels at Town and Country Lanes while City Brake and Wheel nailed down tenpin honors for the second straight year at Mayfair Lanes during the annual Colonist bowlspiels at the weekend.

No Chance won with a 2,864-2,668 victory over Harvey's Smoke Shop of Ladysmith in the final.

In the other fivepin events, Anonomy won "B" honors with a 2,836-2,562 decision over Strikebreakers and Mix Ups topped Pet's Brush of Nanaimo 2,831-2,802 in the "C" final.

Outstanding individual performances were recorded by Darryl Little (men's high series: 899), Jim Lamont (men's high single: 393), Diane Kingsnorth (women's high single: 369), Linda McIntyre (women's high series: 839) and Diana Waring (women's high series out of money: 830).

City Brake and Wheel earned the tenpin title with a 2,420-2,293 win over F Troop.

In other finals, Kermit's Killers collected "B" laurels with a 2,452-2,437 decision over Flyers and Hale's Comets nudged Travellers Hotel 2,330-2,308 in the "C" final.

Individual standouts were Charlotte Stossel (women's series: 646), Sue Holness (women's single: 262), Fred Lobbezoo (men's series: 682) and Bob Ellis (men's single: 279).

Big nominee list for richest race

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The first $1 million race in harness or thoroughbred history, the Woodrow Wilson for two-year-old pacers, has attracted a record 263 nominees, said Joe DeFrank, the Meadowlands racing secretary.

The race will be held Aug. 6 at the Meadowlands.

A $1,000 cheque accompanied each nominee, adding $263,000 to what will be the richest race in the sport's history.

No No Yankee won the first Wilson in 1977, Scarlet Skipper was the winner in 1978 and Niatross finished first last year. The purses were less than $1 million.

Niatross is the early favorite for the July 18 Meadowlands Pace for three-year-olds. A total of 78 three-year-olds have been nominated for the $750,000 purse.

Prices hiked

SEATTLE — Seattle Supersonics have announced an increase in ticket prices for the 1980-81 National Basketball Association season. Ticket costs will rise to $12, $9, $7, $5 and $2 from this season's $10, $8, $6, $3.50 and $1.50.

Mrs. J. D. Royall of Charleston, South Carolina raises fast growing pines as a crop. They compete head on with Canadian forests. While our trees take a lifetime to reach cutting age, some of hers can be harvested in 15 years.

Meet the competition

Mrs. Royall talks like a gentle Scarlett O'Hara, but she is one tough competitor for the Canadian forest industry.

In ten years of careful management, Mrs. Royall has developed a productive forest on her 200 acres. Plantings of fast growing pine are rapidly approaching the size when they can be harvested to feed U.S. paper mills.

Pulp and paper exports bring in about $1000 a year for each Canadian family, more than any other manufacturing industry.

There are 400,000 plantation owners like Mrs. Royall in the American Tree Farm System.

Competition from other lands is increasing (faster growing forests in warm climates, easy harvesting and lower work costs). Thanks to healthier profits, the Canadian pulp and paper industry is able to meet the competition by spending vast sums on new and improved mills and equipment. In 1979, more than one billion dollars was invested to increase efficiency, control energy use and improve the environmental impact of its operations. From coast to coast, companies have announced plans to invest billions more over the next five years to help improve productivity, assure jobs, keep Canada competitive.

To assure future jobs, Canadian governments, along with the forest industry, are increasingly aware of the need for reforestation for future supplies. One Canadian job in ten depends on our forests.

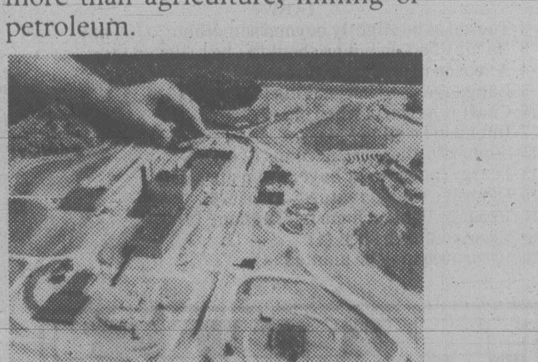
Profit that can be invested in growth is important to all Canadians. Pulp and paper products bring in about $1000 a year in export sales for every family in Canada, more than agriculture, mining or petroleum.



Profits invested in modernizing and expanding mills help Canada compete in the tough international market.

Opening lead — ten of clubs.

Assume you're East, defending against four spades, and your partner leads a club. You cash the A-Q, but what would you play next? It's not so easy to find the right play — even if you see all four hands. However, there is no doubt about the correct move at this point if you consider the matter carefully. You should play another club at trick three!

This may appear to be a dreadful play, since it has been dinned into all of us that a defender should never hand declarer a ruff and discard. But "never" is a long, long time, and every thoughtful player sooner or later learns that words like "never" and "always" don't mean exactly what the dictionary says they mean.

Thus, in the present case, it should be fairly obvious — from looking at dummy and taking South's bidding into account — that there is no real chance of stopping the contract unless declarer has a four-card rather than a five-card trump suit.

You should therefore shape your defense to fit the circumstances you face. If you "play safe" and return a spade, a heart or a diamond, declarer will force you to win the first, second or third trump lead and will easily score the rest of the tricks.

But if you play a club at trick three — intentionally giving declarer a ruff and discard — he cannot make the contract whatever he does. He can ruff in either hand and lead two rounds of trumps — both of which you'd refuse to win — but he would then find himself in a hopeless position.

You would be in control of trumps, instead of declarer, and whatever he played next you would sooner or later win two trump tricks to put the contract down one.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, April 9, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES March 21-April 19): Money is released from escrow. Needed material is made available. Gain indicated through written word. Member of opposite sex confides feelings and your morale soars. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on career, ambitions, building on solid structure and improving relations with members of family. You gain most through diplomacy. Eschew forcing methods. One in position of authority lends helping hand. You are on the way!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Insist on definition to terms. See places, people as they exist, not through haze of self-deception. Pisces, Virgo natives play significant roles. Accent on education, travel, publishing, long-range project. Look beyond the immediate, perceive potential.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are given more responsibility and chances for reward multiply. Accent on finances in connection with close associate, legal partner or mate. Older individual lends benefit of experience. Be receptive, but do not abandon your own style or principles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have option to start now or to delay. Choose latter course. Be aware of legal rights, permissions. Fit together bits and pieces until picture as a whole comes into focus. Emphasis on partnership, joint efforts, marital status.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What seemed a never-ending routine can be transformed into exciting, creative endeavor. Make special efforts to streamline procedures and cut expenses. Special services are featured — co-workers, others who share basic interests will make known their views.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with change, travel, variety, intensified relationship with member of opposite sex. You regain sense of direction. Intutition is honed to razor-sharpness. Long distance communication elevates spirits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get more "working room." Restrictions, blocks to progress are removed. Energetic associate expresses ideas which prove helpful and could lead to profit. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals figure prominently. What you seek is actually close at hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Shake off any tendency to be lethargic. Accent on movement, relatives, messages and short journeys. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Sense of humor proves valuable ally. Know it and be willing to laugh at your own foibles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial prospects are brighter than originally anticipated. Know it and act as if aware of it. Family member who had been reluctant to support your efforts will now be an enthusiastic ally. Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Obtain valuable hint by reading Capricorn message. Imprint style, take initiative, express original concepts and display independence of spirit. Valid opportunity exists to restore family harmony. Luxury item can be obtained at bargain price.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Apparent setback is due to boomerang in your favor. Avoid any tendency to brood — define terms, seek backing of special organization. Another Pisces and a Virgo figure in scenario. Keep promise made to one confined to home, hospital.

IF APRIL 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are drawn to medicine, law, theatre and you are expert at cutting through red tape and getting to heart of matters. You can be aggressive when cause is right and you seldom back down from a fight. Special care should always be taken when handling knives or other sharp objects. It is not unlikely that you have scar, mark or mole on head or face area. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. This month, April, could be your most memorable period of 1980. Priorities come into focus and you get on more solid emotional and financial footing.

Ex-Nazis hiding in Canada?

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan said Monday he is investigating allegations that Nazi war criminals are hiding in Canada.

He said in a telephone interview he has received letters from the Canadian Jewish Congress and some individuals claiming this is the case, but they have offered no evidence that would stand up in court.

Kaplan said he would meet Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal in Washington, D.C., later this month to discuss the situation.

Wiesenthal is to receive a Congressional gold medal for his contribution to international justice by tracking down Second World War criminals.

"If I can find good evidence, fresh evidence of people who were mature during the war, it might be possible to use existing legislation for prosecutions," the solicitor-general said.

Kaplan, one of two Jewish cabinet ministers, said he has long been interested in this issue.

He said all three federal political parties agree war criminals should be brought to justice if they are found in Canada, and the House of Commons unanimously urged West Germany last year not to let the statute of limitations run out on war crimes.

"The political will is there," but there are problems with existing legislation, he said. The Canadian law was used to prosecute two people immediately after the war at a military tribunal in Europe, he said.

But Canadians would probably find it unusual for accused war criminals to be tried in military courts 35 years after the end of the war, he said.

Parliament could pass new legislation to allow civilian prosecutions, but Kaplan said MPs would be reluctant to pass a retroactive law.

A more logical course would be to work with West Germany or Israel to allow extradition of accused war criminals.

Comedian's wife dies of cancer

TORONTO (CP) — Beatrice Wayne, wife of comedian Johnny Wayne, died Monday in Toronto after a five-year battle with cancer.

Mrs. Wayne, 60, met and married her husband — half of the internationally-famous comedy team of Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster — while both were attending the University of Toronto in 1947.

She leaves her husband and three sons.

Sociologists seeing red

CALGARY (CP) — Many Calgary social workers and sociologists say they would support a legalized red-light district for the city if certain conditions were met.

Mayor Ross Alger suggested last week such a district might solve some problems of prostitution. But he said considerable public debate would be needed first.

Mary Ballentich, associate professor at University of Calgary's faculty of social welfare, said men and women would benefit from a red-light district if prostitutes were licensed.

"Through licensing and medical exams, women — especially the very young and emotionally unstable — would be protected," Ms. Ballentich said.

"Licensing would involve an awareness of who's in the business and what's happening to them. Men are also victims (under the present system) and I certainly don't agree with punishing them for such action.

"Obviously their sexual needs are not being met and it's unfortunate we can't set up something that would allow them to gratify themselves without getting hurt."

Gladys Symons, a professor of sociology at the university, said anything that would do away with pimps would be a positive step.

"If prostitution were legitimized, women would control their own work and end exploitation by pimps," Ms. Symons said.

Radio Shack war still on

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Despite last month's settlement of an eight-month strike at the Radio Shack plant in Barrie, the company and the union are still at war.

Since the company and the United Steelworkers of America reached an agreement March 27, the company has fired or laid off four of the local union executive's five members, including president Donna Cadogan. The strikers returned to work Monday, but at least 11 of the 38 due back received layoff notices last Thursday.

"It's so typical of what Radio Shack has done all along," Ms. Cadogan said in an interview. "They never wanted a union from the beginning. Even now that we have an agreement, they're still trying to break us."

Jerry Colella, vice-president of Radio Shack, said the dismissals and layoffs were decided in consultation with a lawyer and were consistent with the agreement.

Since the union began organizing Radio Shack's 200 Barrie employees in 1978, the company has been convicted of several unfair labor practices, including illegal firings.

Inco chief Gordon dies in U.S. home

TORONTO (CP) — James Roycroft Gordon, 81, the retired president of the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. (now Inco) and its U.S. subsidiary, the International Nickel Co. Ltd., has died at his home in Candlewood Isle, Conn.

Gordon, the first Canadian in Inco's history to hold the post, died last Friday after a lengthy illness.

A funeral service will be held in Toronto on Wednesday.

Elected president of Inco in 1960, Gordon retired in 1967 but continued as chairman of both companies until 1969. He was also a director of the Canadian Life Assurance Co.,

AN EASTER SEAL slipped out of the Petitcodiac River and onto Moncton's N.B.'s main street Monday but was finally returned to his natural element after a wild and wooly chase. The seal, estimated to weigh 160 kilograms, was first noticed at mid morning and city officials were notified. A large crowd gathered to watch the antics as the seal resisted all attempts to corral him and snarled a mouthful of threatening teeth at his rescuers. After initial attempts to net the seal met with failure, he was loaded on the back of a truck and taken to a causeway and unceremoniously dumped into the river. The seal was not injured but seemed to be angry after being out of water for several hours.

Ex-consul Lawson dies at 93

TORONTO (CP) — Ray Lawson, former lieutenant-governor of Ontario and Canadian consul general in New York, died Monday in Miami, Fla. He was 93.

Lawson was appointed lieutenant-governor in 1946 and served until 1952.

A year later he was named Canadian consul general to New York. He retired from the position in 1955 after completing plans for his pet project — a Canada House in New York.

He is survived by daughters Jean Kennedy of London, Ont., and Helen Ruth Kindersley of Oakville and by sons Francis Chester, of Miami, Ray Newton, of Baddeck, N.S., and Col. Thomas Frederick Lawson.

Funeral services will be held Thursday in London.

Mexican oil to flow our way

MEXICO CITY (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said Monday he hopes large quantities of Mexican oil will begin flowing into Canada before next winter.

Speaking to reporters after a 30-minute meeting with President Jose Lopez Portillo, the minister said a target of 50,000 barrels of oil to be imported daily is only part of a range of economic projects that the two countries hope will develop from agreements to be signed next month.

He mentioned the possibilities of joint ventures involving Canadians and Mexicans in energy and other fields. Canada also is seeking to interest Mexico in its Candu nuclear reactor.

The agreements were initialled last year by the Mexican government and the Liberal government defeated in the May, 1979, federal election. Among other things they call for the importing of 50,000 barrels of Mexican oil daily by sometime in 1981. Eventually that will rise to 100,000 barrels.

Portillo and Prime Minister Trudeau will sign the agreements in Ottawa next month.

MacGuigan said the schedule of oil deliveries must be negotiated between Petro-Canada and the Mexican oil agency.

"But we hope certainly that we will have a substantial implementation of our target before next winter."

The National Energy Board has already warned Canadians they must conserve energy if they are to get through next winter.

Most of Canada's imported fuel comes from Saudi Arabia and Venezuela. Mexican oil will remove some of the dependence on unstable sources in the Middle East.

The price for the Mexican oil has not yet been negotiated, but Canadian officials warn it will not be cheap.

Despite the fact that it has discovered vast petroleum reserves off its east coast, Mexico is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. But it generally sets its oil prices at slightly higher than OPEC prices. Its price now is between $32 and $33 a barrel. The Canadian domestic price is $14.75.

"There is no friendship price," one Canadian official said. "we will pay a good dollar for the oil."

There is a 12-man group from Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. working with Mexican officials on the possibility of the country using the Candu reactor.

While questioned about oil, MacGuigan also emphasized other forms of economic co-operation.

He told reporters Monday there is potential for substantial growth in relations between Canada and Mexico. He said he hopes there will be announcements following next month's signing in Ottawa on joint projects in several fields, from communication to nuclear energy.

Indian rebellion crisis for Munro

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister John Munro, fighting to save the credibility of his department, may have to take over administration of more than 150 Indian bands across the country because they have refused to sign a tough, new federal financing agreement.

The bands are refusing to give the federal government a tighter rein on band spending, estimated at $300 million this year, because they say it prevents long-term planning, destroys their Indian government concept and breaks the government's long-standing trust relationship with Indians.

The new rules allow Ottawa to finance the bands in three-month instalments, hold back money or take over the reserve if anything goes wrong, prevents the band from improvising to meet its needs and requires more administrative work without a corresponding budget increase.

The bands' refusal forced Munro, who won support last week from northern natives on land claims matters, to issue a weekend ultimatum to Indian chiefs and councils giving them until April 30 to sign the document.

"The minister's got no choice," says Ron Fournier, assistant deputy minister of finance for Indian affairs.

"For years the department has been accused of bad financial and budgetary practices by various Parliamentary committees and the auditor-general, " he said Monday in an interview.

"(The new agreement) is important for the department's credibility . . . and vital if the department is going to be serving Indian people well."

Treasury board recently sat down with all departments, including Indian affairs, and hammered out a new, tougher set of criteria governing spending, Fournier said.

The Indians argue that they had no input into the new regulations and say they warned Hugh Faulkner, former Indian affairs minister, in early 1979 that many bands would not accept them.

Of the 560 bands across the country, 300 have already agreed to the new terms, 100 are negotiating with Ottawa and the others are holding emergency meetings to decide what to do.

In Manitoba, 37 bands have had federal funds cut off because they say they want nothing to do with the new rules. In New Brunswick, 15 bands await the same fate.

Graydon Nicholas, executive director of the Union of New Brunswick Indians, says Ottawa's new policy is a throw-back to 1969 and the infamous policy paper introduced by Jean Chretien, then Indian affairs minister.

The policy called for full integration of Indians into white society, plus the elimination of reserves and special status by which Indians are a federal responsibility under the British North America Act, the constitution.

Indian leaders' strong reaction forced Chretien to withdraw the policy. He later reassured Indians it would never be considered again.

But Nicholas says the Chretien proposal seems to be creeping back into the department's thinking.

"In the present terms and conditions there is not one mention of Indians or Indian reserves or chiefs and councils," Nicholas says. "We are called recipients."

Nicholas says the Indian affairs department also wants Indians, as citizens of a province, to seek financial aid from the provinces and other federal departments, such as manpower and the department of regional economic expansion.

"That's all Chretien's white paper policy (that) we thought was effectively destroyed and it isn't."

Nicholas says the new rules are not understood by the majority of bands, including those who signed the agreement.

They don't realize that Ottawa can take over the reserve at the slightest provocation, that money cannot be used in emergencies by band councils without permission from Ottawa and that the stricter rules mean more money spent on administration without a corresponding budget increase.

Stubborn postal worker creates shirtsleeve war

TORONTO (CP) — A postal worker's willingness to lose three weeks' pay rather than wear the regulation shirts and ties provided by the post office has prompted an arbitrator hearing the case to speculate on whether "working for the post office tends to create this type of aberration in some people."

J. D. O'Shea of the Public Service Staff Relations Board said the obstinacy of the employee, a wicket clerk in Toronto, "exemplified a tactic of confrontation that can do nothing but worsen the relationship between the parties."

The post office had refused to let the employee work for three weeks because he wouldn't wear the issued shirts and ties. The worker claimed it was contrary to the collective agreement between the post office and its employees for him to wear the issue of two jackets, six shirts and four ties.

O'Shea said the worker's refusal "makes as much sense and would be equally reprehensible and contrary to the spirit and intent (of the collective agreement) as if he were to insist on wearing both coats, all six shirts and four ties at the same time."

"If he (the worker) believed there was an element of unjustness in the (shirt and tie) requirement then he should have complied with the rule and filed a grievance," said O'Shea.

The arbitrator said he was disappointed in the attitude displayed by William Dagleish, Ontario director for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, who instructed the union members to refuse to wear the shirts and ties because he believed the matter was one for negotiation between the two parties.

"It is to be hoped that Mr. Dagleish's advice to members of the bargaining unit concerning the wearing of issued shirts and ties is not really representative of the quality of leadership which he provides," said O'Shea.

O'Shea upheld the post office's right to refuse to let the wicket clerk work unless he was wearing the regulation shirt and tie.

Edith Head says the era of true glitter in Hollywood is gone — that in the '30s and '40s a star dressed like a million, emerging from a session of filming in furs and diamonds, "even if her character was on poverty row." On an upcoming segment of ABC-TV's Omnibus, the Academy Award winning fashion designer to the stars explains the "Hollywood Rule" — says "That was the way to win a rich husband and live happily ever after."

Bart Bourne lost his shirt because Torontonians preferred the real King Tut exhibit to his "Reproseum." The 37-year-old Winnipegger took out a second mortgage on his house to finance the months he spent reproducing Tut artifacts and housing them in a walk-in tomb complete with audio-visual effects. But his exhibit just hasn't caught on in the city that played host to the real thing, and the Canadian Armed Forces pilot is selling the contents of his home to meet a $60,000 debt. Bourne says just about everything will go — antiques, odds and ends, and his prized collection of Second World War memorabilia, the remains of a bi-plane, and four sports cars.

Burnett

Columbus, Ohio, Zoo director Jack Hanna watched in dumbfounded disgust as a horde of thousands of adults stormed rope fences he and his volunteers had erected around the area of the zoo's first Easter egg hunt. Greedily, they scooped up the marshmallow-filled chocolate eggs strewn in plain sight for the little children, gobbling up 2,000 of them in less than five minutes. Says Hanna, "It was like watching 5,000 rats that haven't eaten in weeks." He says the children for whom the hunt was staged never had a chance.

Carol Burnett will get another shot at the National Enquirer. Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Robert Weil has reinstated her $5 million libel suit against the tabloid — after dismissing that part of her case in February. Now Weil says new evidence "clearly shows a muckraking intent to discredit and defame Miss Burnett." Weil earlier ruled the Enquirer had shown no malice in a 1976 gossip item saying Burnett had spilled a glass of wine in a Washington, D.C., restaurant in the course of a brawl with Henry Kissinger. The new evidence includes testimony from two restaurant employees saying they told the Enquirer, before the item was published, that it didn't happen.

Dear Abby:

Ours is a sticky family problem. Grandma loves to knit, and she gives her handiwork to members of the family for Christmas. She never asks anyone's size — she guesses. And Abby, some of her creations are unreal! She'll start knitting a sweater, and if she runs out of yarn, she finishes it with another color.

She made one nephew who loves to ski a scarf about five yards long. ("Just keep wrapping it around your neck," she told him.)

The colors she puts together are atrocious and the styles are from 30 years ago. But her knitting is flawless; it's a pity nobody can wear what she knits.

Loves Grandma

Dear Loves:

The solution is so obvious, I'm amazed you didn't think of it yourself. Anyone whose knitting is "flawless" can make things people can wear. The family should provide Grandma with yarn and patterns. (Obviously she can use them.) She will appreciate the guidance, and in return "the family" will receive wearable gifts they can enjoy.

Dear Abby:

I am a single woman, 29, who has been in love with a married man for seven years. He's 50 and my employer. He has not been happy at home since I've known him, but he is a family man and there are many reasons why he won't leave his wife. He never promised me marriage, but, of course, I always hoped that one day it would happen. I am a very attractive woman, and I have never gone out with another man since I started seeing him.

I know he loves me, but lately he has been telling me that we should call it quits, that I should forget him and find a younger man to love and marry.

Abby, I don't want a younger man. I may be foolish, but I am happy to go on the way we are, and if I never marry, that's not the worst fate in the world.

My best friend and confidante has told me I should quit my job, say goodbye to this man, and try to build a life for myself without him. What do you say?

In Love

Dear In. With a best friend and confidante as wise as yours, you don't need any advice from Dear Abby.

Dear Abby: Why do people insist on trying to persuade guests to stay longer after they have spent hours at a party, wedding, etc., and feel that they have had enough of it? I'm tired of being asked why we are leaving "so soon."

Abby, please put this in your own words, and tell people that when guests say goodbye, it is very poor manners for the host and hostess to make them feel they are leaving prematurely. Thank you.

Knit pickers have big choice

By LON WOOD

There's no need to take coal to Newcastle or ham sandwiches to a banquet — and there's no need to bring quality-made woolen sweaters to Victoria, either.

Whether it's a handwoven mohair stole or a bulky knit Indian sweater — or a sweater of your own design — there are over two dozen custom knitting and wool shops in the Victoria area.

They all use pure wool in color blends that are imaginative and effective. Some spin and dye their own wool and mohair. Others produce their own designs and in some cases produce their own wool.

"There's a stereotype impression that all mohair stoles come from Scotland — and that's it," says Isa Murdoch, of the Handloom on Johnson Street. "People often overlook the local product. Around town there are many, many choices of quality woollens that are hand-done — this includes stoles from Salt Spring Island which we have.

"More and more locals are becoming frequent shoppers for these quality-made local and Canadian woollens — but the Americans come here in great numbers just by hearing of us by word of mouth."

Murdoch said the Handloom sells both yarn and finished goods "or you can buy tweeds to match the yarn — it's getting to be quite a sophisticated system of suiting tastes."

The shop has local stoles ranging upwards from $50 and stocks other Canadian-made woven items such as handbags and men's ties.

At Clutterbuck's Wool Tuck on Pandora, there is a fast-growing demand for custom-knit items.

"People come in with their own ideas and have them made up — unique sweaters, all different styles. We have quite a volume in this area," says Leslie Benoit of Clutterbuck's.

The store supplies wool and designs to knitters throughout the community, to produce items for the Market Square premises.

"We have people at home knitting for us. It's all our ideas and wool — mostly pullovers in some very unique and colorful styles, she said."

Clutterbuck's sells wool as well, and Benoit says most of it — "except for boucles and such" — comes from within British Columbia.

"B.C. wool is quite a bit nicer or at least comparable to imported wools," she said.

Marie Hamersley, of the Golden Hand on Johnson, has knitters duplicating traditional import knits.

"We make Icelandic sweaters, and the Aran knits. I don't like the looseness of the ones we can import," she said. "We also take our own handspun wool and knit jackets — the weight of the Indian sweaters but not the same type.

"We can make just about anything you want."

Hamersley said she has been importing sweaters from the Shetland Islands but now has two local knitters making Shetland yokes.

"I provide a yoke, and the wool, and people are knitting their own," she said.

Hamersley began her business eight years ago because she felt there was a need for more sophisticated wool knits.

"There was a lot of funky stuff around, but nothing at that time for the average person," she said. "Even today there are people with simple tastes and simple problems — like the Vancouver man we just made a sweater for. He is enormous and wanted a wool sweater but could only get acryllics."

Hamersley said she has never catered particularly to tourists.

"I don't believe in that. There are just too many Victoria area people with their own tastes and needs."

By far the best-known knitted item from Vancouver Island is the Cowichan Indian sweater — pure, unprocessed natural wool, handknit in designs known around the world.

"These sweaters are bought for quality by everyone — particularly the Japanese," says Daryl Foster of Sasquatch Trading on Government Street. "I can't say why they are so popular with them, but I do know that they sell in Japan for as high as $250 U.S."

The Indians of the Cowichan Valley north of Victoria, he said, first learned to knit from Scottish settlers who farmed the area. Present designs have evolved from a blending of both the Scottish and Indian idioms.

"Like so much of the knitting being done on Southern Vancouver Island now, it's purely cottage craft," said Foster. "It's an art form passed down from mother and father to son or daughter. A particular sweater can often be recognized as to who knitted it — not unlike a tartan, the family's work is recognizable."

Cost of Cowichan sweaters ranges from about $70 to $150 in most Victoria stores.

Biggest advantage of using natural wool is that it retains water repellant qualities lost when it is bleached for dying.

"You find twigs . . . whatever — the Indians don't buy spun wool," said Foster.

But even the Cowichan sweater has its imitators.

"Vancouver people have started to make what is called by the Indians an imitation Cowichan Indian sweater," said Foster. "To us it is not an imitation — it is just another woolen sweater. The important difference in the so-called imitations is that they are not usuing natural unprocessed wools. They are using dyed wools which are as a rule less expensive and their lifetime is considerably shorter.

"Nothing can match the Cowichan Indian sweater — and when we think of them, we need not think of them as being radically different when we consider an Irish or a Scottish knit. They can be very dressy — and in this climate you can always remember that wet wool is still warm, whereas wet cotton is very cold."

Nuclear medicine used increasingly

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Even though my work has been far removed from medicine, I have always had a profound interest in it. Now that I am retired, I can indulge myself in learning about modern-day science.

Can you tell me where I can get more information about nuclear medicine and what it is doing for the common man? Is it all vague yet or are there any practical uses?

Mr. M.P.P.

Dear Mr. P:

Before getting down to your question, I would like to say that indulgence in a hobby is one of the sustaining forces that keeps the retired person from boredom and from isolation from society. Planning for retirement should begin at an early age. Far too many people are suddenly and precipitously dislocated from their jobs and find themselves stranded, trying to bear the heavy burden of time.

Leisure is a special commodity that one must learn to handle many years before retirement. Unless this is so, retirement — especially premature retirement — can become unbearable. Those who have anticipated retirement can make the transition well and make the post-retirement years filled with joys.

There are now many areas in medicine where you can pursue your interest. Hospitals and universities constantly seek volunteers with your obvious cultivation. There you will be in contact with the peripheral aspects of science and medicine.

Now about nuclear medicine. Did you know that there is a Journal of Nuclear Medicine published by the Society of Nuclear Medicine in New York City? You would be fascinated to read of the exciting advances that are being made in this field. For example, it can now be said that there is no hidden area of the body that cannot be reached and studied with radioisotopes and with other radioactivated chemicals.

The kidneys, the pancreas, the heart, the lungs, the brain, the liver and the blood vessels can now be visualized and studied for disease that might formerly have been elusive. Renograms (kidney), hepatograms (liver), and thyroid-grams (thyroid) are all real, practical techniques today.

Before the advent of nuclear medicine, these were all in the realm of speculative philosophy. At that time it was barely conceivable that the science of nuclear medicine would have today's application. Using radioactive substances, the most sophisticated tests of breast tumors can now be safely made. Even the entire endocrine system is being studied with receptors that have unlimited possibilities.

Lemon juice can remove ciggie stains

Dear Rena Paul:
Finally, after years of badgering by my family, I've licked the smoking habit. I haven't touched a cigarette for over a year. Yet I'm angry and frustrated by people I meet who take one look at my fingers and tell me, "You should stop smoking; it's bad for you, you know." Is there anything I can do to get rid of these awful nicotine stains? They're still haunting me!

Liz T.

Dear Liz:
There's no reason your fingers have to confess your past vices! Rubbing them with fresh lemon juice daily for 2 weeks should bleach out the stains sufficiently.

P.S. This also works for nails stained red from constant use of dark nail polishes.

Dear Rena Paul:
Although I've exercised all my life and worked hard at keeping a "toned" body, I seem to have acquired "stretch marks" after my recent pregnancy. Can I do anything to make them go away?

Judy R.

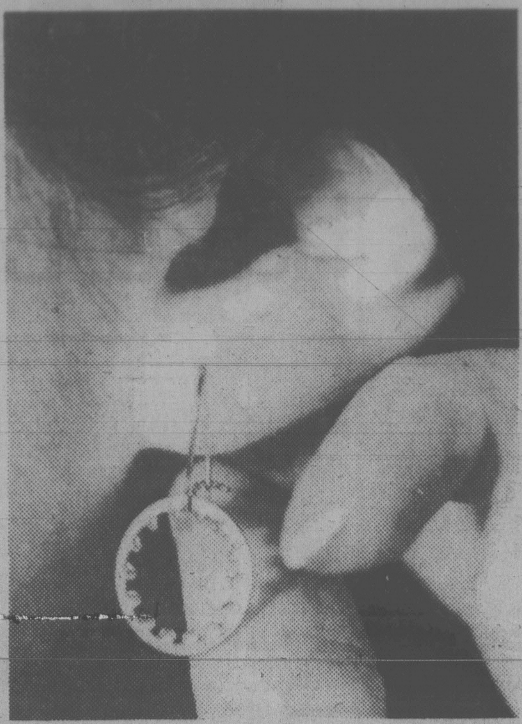
Dear Judy:
No. Unfortunately there's not much you can do to rush them away. They may fade with time, but just as likely not. A light sun tan will frequently make stretch marks less visible. You might try a light film of foundation make-up on the "stretched" area, if it's exposed and you feel self-conscious. It's the degree of elasticity in the skin that determines whether you'll have stretch marks or not. Fortunately, the problem is generally not so serious that it should ever be anything to worry about. Be glad you're in good health and enjoy your children!

Dear Rena Paul:
I have a fabulous sable brush which I received years ago, in a certain brand of blush-on. Now they only have synthetic brushes, so when I buy a new compact I still retain my old sable brush. Should I wash it from time to time, as it's getting quite stiff and "un-springy"?

Karen L.

Dear Karen:
I'm glad you didn't tell me how long ago you got this sable brush! By all means, clean it. All those years of collected grime and bacteria could play havoc with your skin. A gentle wash in a mild detergent such as hair shampoo (you may have to give it several washes) should do the trick. Shake off the excess water and place handle-down in a cup to air dry. Don't hurry the process by applying heat of any kind. This will destroy your fine sable brush in no time. If you feel you can't wait a day or so for it to dry, try and buy another one and alternate them. If you use blush-on regularly, you should be washing the brush at least every couple of weeks.

P.S. I agree with you about the synthetic brushes — they seem to tear up more blush-on than one needs, thereby forcing the user to re-buy more often. It's still a better investment all round to buy a good sable brush which will last (with good care) for years and years. You were wise to hold onto yours!



FASHIONABLE ACCESSORIES are not necessarily to be purchased at fashionable prices — at least not if you are daring. Why not try some lock-washer earings. This item costs very little — just 10 cents for the pair.

Early razor work of art

the collectors

By KEN RICHARDSON

Shaving has brought about many kinds of inventions but none, possibly as useful or decorative as the cut-throat. Iron razors were made in Britain from the 12th century onwards but improved most significantly during the 17th century. The early razors were little more than a length of steel with scarcely any shape to them. The tang was usually stamped with the maker's name, with the word "Warranted" or "Cast Steel" added. The handles were either wood, bone or horn with brass rivets and iron washers. Another clue to age; there might be impressed initials of the reigning monarch.

Cast steel razors were first made in 1771 and today are a prime collectors item. With intensified competition new promotional features were added, resulting in changes in design and content. Eventually, decorative improvements were such that the straight razor became — after the pocket knife — the most attractive piece of cutlery on the market.

The early 1800s witnessed the birth of many beautiful and interesting handle designs; materials like pearl, silver, rosewood, tortoise shell, ebony, ivory and stag and even buffalo horn were used. Slogans like 'Old English Razor' appeared. Scenes and personalities had their images impressed. Again, the blade — from being thick and wedge-shaped became more tapered and sometimes featured a notched point. Blade etching reached the status of an art and specimens of the work are becoming increasingly difficult to find. Malleable celluloid later superseded the old handle materials; it could be shaped into all manner of interesting designs such as pictures of animals, trees and even buildings.

There are many important collections stemming from items made since the middle of the last century; advice from the owners concerned would be most helpful. Flea markets sometimes have pieces of high merit. Fairly substantial collections have been known to surface at auctions or estate sales.

Condition of the razor is of importance. Chips or cracks in the handle, pitting or rust in the blade weigh heavily against the value. However, such factors can be offset by superior decorative work.

youth clinic

Dear Rev. Cotter: I want to believe in God. But every day I see so many example of people hurt; sometimes through their own stupidity and sometimes for no reason. If God is all-powerful and all-loving, why does this happen? Why wouldn't he make people emotionally strong so they wouldn't suffer such things as alcoholism or depression? Why do we just have to have a blind faith that He exists?

Answer: At the heart of Christian faith there is a belief that God is all-loving . . . but that to truly show his love he suspends being all-powerful. The heart of our faith is that in Jesus Christ, God put aside his divine power and took on human weakness.

To be fully and freely ourselves as human being we must be able to take charge of our own destiny without being spoon-fed by a paternalistic God, such as would protect us from suffering and stupidity.

Dear Dr. Levine: I am 13 and my parents are separated. I only see my father Saturdays. I have to put up with my mother the rest of the week.

She receives child support payments and spends it all on her own clothes, makeup and hair. We rarely have food in the house, but I have a small job so she tells me to pay for lunch myself.

She picks fights for no reason. She calls me a spoiled brat and hits me.

I'm really depressed. One day I'll hit her back. And as soon as I get a job, I'm going to move to somwhere I'll never see her again.

Answer: Wow! You do have a terrible burden to bear. I wish that you could level with your mother, and that she would come to her senses, but that appears unlikely. I wish that you could march down to the local Children's Aid Society and ask for "protection," but most kids of 13 find that difficult to do.

If your mom or dad can't or won't help you, then you are going to have to try to speak to someone who will. Is there an aunt or uncle who can intercede on your behalf? What about your family's minister, if you belong to a congregation, or your doctor, if you trust him or her? How about your school's social worker, or guidance counsellor? There are teen drop in centres or adolescent clinics in your cith — could you go or phone there and ask for an appointment to speak to one of the staff? Finally my suggesting to you regarding the Children's Aid Society was not a joke. You can call or go there, and ask to speak to one of their social workers. They will be glad to help.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am an 18-year-old female who has a jealous boyfriend. The problem is getting worse and it's over nothing. I go out with my girlfriend and he thinks I'm trying to see another guy.

I try to tell him but he doesn't seem to believe me. The situation makes me so upset I cry.

Answer: As a person you should expect to be treated with respect, you should expect some understanding, your feelings should be considered and not abused, and you should not be treated as an "object" that someone can own, or keep all to themselves, or "lose."

He has a problem, and you will need to decide whether or not you want to keep him and his problem.

Dear Dr. Powell: I am 15-year-old and female, and I was wondering if you could tell me if there is any way to increae my bust measurement.

Answer: In early teenage years it is easy to become self-conscious about the size and shape of breasts. This self-consciousness may last throughout your life. Most women want to have larger breasts so they will feel more attractive sexually. But the size of the breast has very little to do with the way it functions.

Your weight-lifting exercises will not increase the size of your breasts but will only increase the size of the muscles that underly the breasts.

There are no magic potions or exercises which will give you ideal size breasts. So do not waste your money answering advertisements in magazines.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Layering of clothes curbs cold

EDMONTON (CP) — Two men lie down in the snow, one in the specialized, layered dress of a mountaineer, the other in light street clothes.

After five minutes, the only complaint from Jim Jeffery, bundled in fleecy synthetic long-johns, wool socks, mitts and hooded windbreaker is that his exposed nose is a little cold.

But Ken Friedrich, wearing blue jeans, shirt and light jacket, is already shivering after one minute in the snow, and in 2½ minutes his body is convulsing about every 15 seconds.

After four minutes, Friedrich's jaw is shaking uncontrollably, his lips shake and his breathing is erratic. He says he's becoming light-headed.

"All right, end of experiment," says instructor Chris Hamilton. "This man is becoming hypothermic."

"Get inside right now," he orders as students scribble observations in their notebooks.

Hypothermia, or lowering of the temperature of the body core, has been described as the silent killer of outdoors people. It is silent because it can come on without the victim or his companion's awareness. Unless detected early and treated promptly, it can lead to irreversible convulsions.

And, contrary to popular belief, it doesn't just strike in the wilderness or in winter.

Hamilton, an Edmonton high-school teacher with 20 years' experience as a mountaineering instructor in Canada and England, says it may be killing the elderly in their homes.

There has been recent evidence that hypothermia may be a factor in crib deaths — unexplained infant deaths.

In treating mild cases, fit people usually respond well in a warm bed or use of a warm bath or warm packs.

In moderate or severe cases, with a temperature drop below 32 Celsius, rewarming with hot baths in a hospital may be successful 50 to 70 per cent of the time.

Hamilton says the best way to prevent hypothermia is by regulating body temperature through proper food and dress. Since the body can generate heat only by burning calories, the body's furnace should be stoked with high-calorie foods. Plenty of liquids should also be taken to stave off dehydration.

Hamilton also recommends that enough clothes be worn or carried to keep the body warm without sweating. Pace in the outdoors is also crucial.

Anyone who goes so fast that he becomes drenched in sweat is "a raving idiot," Hamilton says.

Hamilton says gear in the packsack should include a lightweight nylon emergency shelter which a person can crawl into for shelter.

Since heart or lung failure may occur, everyone should know cardiopulmonary resuscitation, he says. Most hypothermia victims die of cardiac arrest, not of the cold.

BACK IN THE SADDLE and practicing his polo skills this week in West Palm Beach, Florida, was Prince Charles. The heir to the British throne was put in hospital late last week after suffering from heat exhaustion while playing polo for two hours in 30-degree Celsius south Florida temperatures. Charles, who flew to Florida immediately after a visit to Vancouver and Victoria, was there on a private visit and as a spectator at the opening round of the World Cup polo tournament.

'Hate' spices routine for Baptist weddings

LONDON (UPI) — Some of Britain's brides and grooms soon will have the option of putting a little realism in their wedding vows by admitting the day may come when they will hate each other.

A new service book for Baptist ministers includes the optional pledge for brides and grooms. It reads:

I will love you in good times and bad,
I will love when it is easy and when it is difficult,
I will love you when I love you and when I hate you.
When my love is hidden by jealousy, spite and pettiness,
Please go on loving me."

A footnote explains the use of the word hate, saying the opposite of love is indifference.

"Hate is at least an expression of caring," the footnote says.

The Rev. Alec Gilmore, one of three Baptist ministers who compiled the book, said he heard the vow used at a wedding three years ago.

He said there had been "some opposition" to the optional vow among fellow ministers, but the passage was approved by the book's publishers, The Baptist Union.

The book, Praise God, already is on sale to Britain's 2,000 Baptist ministers, but will not be official until later this year when it will be launched at The Baptist Union's annual assembly.

Pointers on pantyhose

By JOHANNE LEACH

VANCOUVER (CP) — "She has a fine DPL," says Woody Allen in the movie Annie Hall.

What's a DPL?

It stands for definite panty line, the demarcation created by a pair of too-tight panties under snug jeans or skirt.

Since the invention of the pantyhose with the panty attached to the stocking, it's possible to avoid the DPL. With a pair of pantyhose you can wear your clothes, especially clingy knits, with a smooth, unwrinkled line.

But when it's time to shop for pantyhose, you can feel like a five-year-old deciding on a candy bar.

The selection of colors, styles, prices and brands is confusing and exhausting, especially if you hit on a long lineup or an unhelpful sales clerk.

Vice-presidents from six major Canadian hosiery companies, here for a promotion at Woodward's Stores, said the key to successful shopping is to shop where you get good service.

Then, when you find a brand you like, stick with it.

My complaint about this suggestion is that most manufacturers do not label their goods. Once you have tossed away the package, you have no idea what brand you purchased.

Their answer: Labelling would increase the price.

How to care for your hose:

Treat it gently, they advise. Hose will not run unless a yarn filament is broken.

When you put on your pantyhose, roll it down and then roll it on to the leg. Use a fine cotton glove if you have rough edges on your nails.

The heavier the denier (fibre weight and thickness) the stronger the pantyhose. The lighter the denier the less the durability.

You won't get the same wearability with a 10-denier stocking as you will with a 20-denier. A 50-denier weight should last a long time.

Patterned hose is more fragile than plain because of the mixing of two different weights of yarn.

Patterned stockings are still popular and will return again for fall. There will be a trend to opaque stockings and to ultra sheers. Wines, plums, teals, dark browns and the standard beiges are the main colors for autumn.

I complained that unless you grab patterned and colored hose as soon as they hit the stores, you are out of luck later in the season.

The hosiery experts admitted the industry did not anticipate the demand for these fashion items.

What's in the future for the industry?

By 1981, the businessmen predicted wider acceptance of sheer-support and control-top hose.

And Ernest Fiederer, president of Caprice (Can Can) Hosiery, said that by 1985 women will not wear another garment under their pantyhose.

The industry is developing a smoother panty top and attempting to come up with motifs or patterns to give the panty more of a lingerie look.

The cotton gusset, introduced in some lines, will be more widely used when the technique of adding the gusset automatically has been perfected. At this point it is a manual, costly job.

And the bad news: Because pantyhose is a petrochemical product, prices are on the increase, just like the price of oil.

Here is a glossary of terms to help you shop for pantyhose:

Sheer light support: A gentle control pantyhose for people on their feet a lot. This stocking is actually better value than normal hose because of the yarns and lycra used. Although it is twice the price of regular hose it will last longer.

Full support: A heavier pantyhose for anyone with leg problems.

Sheer: A fine pantyhose with a 20-denier weight.

Super sheer: An ultrafine hose which will run if you sneeze — 10- or 11-denier.

All sheer: Pantyhose with no reinforcing in the toe or panty.

Sandalfoot: No reinforcement in the toe.

Opaque: Pantyhose which is not transparent. Do not wear if your legs are heavy.

Control panty: Lightweight support panty that is usually a spandex type of garment.

Demi-toe: Stocking or pantyhose with nude, sheer heel and less toe reinforcement.

Denier: The weight and thickness of each thread in the stocking. The lower the denier number the thinner the yarn and the sheerer the stocking.

One size: Term applied to pantyhose that fit most sizes from very small to very large. In fact, the one size accommodates about 75 per cent of buyers.

Outsize: Pantyhose proportioned for a heavier woman.

Spandex: A generic term denoting a man-made elastic fibre used in place of rubber in support hose and pantyhose. Lycra is spandex.

Blink caution

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A University of Waterloo eye specialist says most people with contact lenses blink wrong. People tend to flutter-blink or partial-blink, and this can irritate and damage the cornea, the specialist said. A study shows, however, that almost all infants are excellent blinkers.

THAT SINKING FEELING hit another North Sea oilfield hotel Sunday when hotel platform Henrik Ibsen tilted over in Stravanger harbor, Norway. No one was injured on the Ibsen, which was slated to replace the ill-fated Alexander Kielland that capsized March 27, killing 123 North Sea workers.

Third world craving for cigs worries WHO

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The "epidemic" of tobacco smoking in industrial countries will spread to developing countries unless their governments take steps to prevent it, a World Health Organization official said Monday.

Dr. Daniel Horn said some tobacco companies hope an expanding market in developing countries will make up for shrinking markets in developed parts of the world.

Any rise in Third World smoking would mean future increases in lung cancer, emphysema and other smoking-related diseases, he said.

"We are dealing with a new kind of health problem," said Horn, one of 10 members of a WHO committee on smoking control. "Our problem is not to cure a disease but to prevent one from happening."

He spoke at a news conference on the anniversary of the founding of WHO in 1948. The organization is dedicated to combating smoking as "the largest single preventable cause of ill health in the world."

Horn noted that in the United States and some other countries, the proportion of smokers is declining.

"At the same time, fresh markets appear to be available in developing countries, where in many cases only four or five per cent of the people are regular smokers," he said.

"The prospect of increasing this to 15 or 20 per cent presents the opportunity for much larger profits."

But a tobacco industry spokesman said many Third World countries have encouraged Western companies to "come in, build factories, employ people and pay taxes."

"As countries develop, historically they have wanted Western products, whether it's cigarettes or blue jeans, and the international tobacco companies are going to try to fill that demand," said Walker Merryman of the Tobacco Institute, a Washington-based trade group.

Meanwhile, in a related development, the top two U.S. cigarette manufacturers, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and Philip Morris U.S.A., said they would introduce the lowest-tar cigarettes ever made, with less than 0.1 milligram of tar, to take advantage of the growing popularity of cigarettes with low tar content.

Phillip Morris said a version of its Cambridge cigarettes, which will go on sale across the United States on May 5, will have less than 0.1 mg of tar. The brand will be available in a box, while a soft pack version will have one mg tar and Cambridge 100s will have four mg tar.

The Philip Morris announcement followed the introduction earlier Monday by top-ranked R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of a new lower-tar version of its NOW cigarette brand.

"In effect, this new NOW product delivering less than one-tenth of a milligram of tar per cigarette is the closest thing to a tar-free cigarette," said Edward Horrigan, Reynolds chairman and chief executive officer.

Winds and hail buffet U.S.

The Associated Press

Tornadoes, high winds and hail slashed the United States from Round Rock, Tex., to Beaver Dam, Wis., lifting one house trailer 25 metres into the air and destroying more than 100 homes. Two persons were known dead and at least 75 others injured.

Businesses were damaged and a post office, library and drive-in theatre were destroyed as the storms hit suburban St. Louis and several small towns in Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Wisconsin.

The tornadoes were spawned in a atmospheric battle between temperatures of 38 Celsius in Texas and the near zero in North Dakota, where as much as 15 centimetres of snow fell Monday.

In the St. Louis suburb of Florissant, 12 persons were taken to hospital, one in serious condition, after a tornado struck shortly after 10 p.m., extensively damaging 60 homes.

"We heard the noise," said Janet Eisele. Her house was damaged but, the family was not hurt. "My husband and I each reached for a kid to head for the basement, but the pressure was so strong we just couldn't move."

The tornado flattened some houses, leaving only piles of rubble and empty shells. Most houses in northwest Florissant received roof damage.

In central Texas, one man was killed, another was injured, 15 houses were destroyed and 12 were damaged as tornadoes struck Round Rock, Lund and Elgin. The man died in his home. "The building collapsed down on him," said Police Lieut. Wesley Wolff.

In Oklahoma, a nine-year-old boy drowned when a boat on Foss Lake in the west central part of the state capsized in high winds.

In Arkansas, 22 persons were injured as tornadoes hit near Mayflower south of Fort Smith, and nearby Witcherville, Mansfield and Midland.

Aussies fight drought

SYDNEY (UPI) — The worst drought in nearly 80 years is forcing Australian farmers to slaughter hundreds of thousands of cattle and an official warned Monday there will be spectacular increases in food prices.

Bankruptcy-threatened ranchers fear that if no rain falls before the winter frosts become severe, pastures that are already scorched across large areas of the continent will turn into dustbowls.

Thousands of kangaroos have perished and experts said millions more would die of thirst and starvation unless rain comes soon.

Some 656,000 square miles have been hit by drought.

Russ Godden, regional agriculture director for the New South Wales town of Gunnedah, said more than 80 per cent of the state has been hit by the drought, the worst since 1902. Large areas of Queensland, Western Australia and Victoria also have been badly hit.

Parts of New South Wales have had no major rainfall in 10 months and some wheat belts in Western Australia have wilted under four years of subnormal rainfall.

Navy torpedoes expense cheats

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — A fraud investigation involving travel claims for men working at Nanaimo has spread to the Naval Undersea Warfare Engineering Station at Keyport, and a U.S. Navy spokesman said 171 enlisted men have been implicated.

In the Keyport cases, about $220,000 was improperly claimed, said Lt. Cmdr. Rick Hammes, station spokesman. He said Puget Sound Naval Shipyard cases involved about $47,000.

Unlike civilians at the shipyard also caught padding their expense accounts, the navy men have been reprimanded or given suspended sentences.

About 80 shipyard workers have been convicted of misdemeanors, fined up to $1,000, put on probation for a year and ordered to do community service work.

Navy men must pay back the entire per diem amount for any day in which they falsely claimed even a portion of that amount.

That amounts to $46 a day, the allowance when staying at Nanaimo motels while working at the joint U.S.-Canadian torpedo testing range at Nanoose Bay.

The Keyport violations occurred from January 1977 to May 1978, Hammes said.

Three Mile test wells cause alarm

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Traces of radiation have been detected in test wells around the base of the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear reactor, but plant operators are unsure whether severely contaminated water has begun to leak for the first time since the March, 1979, accident.

Small amounts of radioactive cobalt and tritium were found last week in water samples from the wells, plant officials said in a statement issued Monday. But no unusual radiation has been found in the Susquehanna River downstream from the plant, it said.

A leak from the Unit 2 reactor's containment building — where about 600,000 gallons of cooling water have stood in the basement for more than a year — "has not been ruled out as the source of the radioactivity, pending further investigation," the statement said.

But a more likely source of the radiation is an outside water-storage tank with 400,000 gallons of mildly contaminated cooling water for the undamaged but idle Unit 1 reactor.

Frank Ingram, a spokesman for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Washington, said "I don't think anybody really knows yet" where the radiation is coming from.

As to whether it was leaking from Unit 2, he said: "That's a possibility, but not a probability." He said leakage from the storage tank also is a possibility, but that more testing is needed.

The Unit 2 reactor was badly mangled March 28, 1979, in the worst commercial nuclear accident in the United States and officials have been concerned about the possibility of leaks.

Eight test wells were drilled around the building earlier this year.

Rightists free Irish soldiers in Lebanon

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Israeli-backed Christian militiamen released all nine captured Irish privates of the UN peace-keeping force today despite their threats to kill some if the Irish battalion did not pull out of the border village of Al Tiri, a UN official said.

Three of the captives were released early this afternoon by Saad Haddad, the renegade Lebanese army major whose rightist, Israeli-supplied forces control a narrow strip alongside the border with Israel, but six others remained held by the militiamen who had threatened to execute them if the pullout of the Irish battalion from Al Tiri was not completed by suppertime.

UN sources said no Irish troops had been withdrawn from anywhere.

The soldiers were captured Monday by Haddad's forces after a clash between two sides around the strategic bridge of Al Tiri, during which one Irish private was seriously wounded and taken to a hospital in the Israeli town of Haifa.

A UN statement said the fighting occurred when a sizeable number of militiamen, with one armored vehicle and two Land-Rovers, forcibly entered At Tiri village in the Irish contingent sector, after ramming aside on Irish vehicle with the intention of setting up a permanent checkpoint at At Tiri.

In a related development, tension in the south increased as the inhabitants feared an Israeli retaliation against the Palestinian guerrilla raid on a kibbutz in northern Israel Monday, travellers from the south said.

Feminist loses church appeal

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — A Mormon church court has upheld the excommunication of feminist Sonia Johnson, who waged a campaign against the church's opposition to the equal rights amendment to the U.S. constitution.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints maintains that the amendment is a threat to family unity, and a bishop's court in Johnson's Sterling, Va., stake (diocese) excommunicated her last December. She appealed the decision to a high council — a local church governing body.

In a telephone interview from her home Monday night, she said the high council convened last month without her knowledge, but waited until after the church's 150th annual world conference Sunday to inform her of its decision.

The decision was written March 24 by her stake president, Earl Rouesche, and hand-delivered Monday night by two members of the council.

Johnson said she will appeal the latest decision directly to the church's ruling First Presidency, consisting of church President Spencer Kimball and his two counsellors.

"I guess I'm going to have to follow it to the end," Johnson said. "I still love a lot of the doctrine and good things in the church. I'm still just as much a Mormon as I ever was."

The stake president rejected her claim of procedural errors in the excommunication proceedings. Johnson said Rouesche's letter to her said she had not shown any repentance.

"I didn't repent because I didn't do the things they charged me with in the first place," she said.

The excommunication was based on statements about the church she allegedly made in speeches, including a charge that Mormon leaders hate women.

Johnson denies she was referring to church leaders when she used the term.

Colleges' entry test changed

WASHINGTON (LAT) — The College Board, in response to criticism of the national college entrance exams it administers, Monday announced "major changes" in the tests effective this fall.

College Board President George Hanford said that, among other things, students will now be permitted to verify their scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

He also said that SAT test questions will be made public a year after the tests are given, that steps will be taken to strengthen the monitoring of test questions for cultural bias, and that third-party committees will be set up to mediate grievances concerning the tests.

CBC axes Ombudsman

TORONTO (CP) — CBC Television has cancelled the Ombudsman program and the Watson Report will be dropped early next year in a news and public affairs shakeup, The Canadian Press has learned.

Changes include the previously announced plan to move the network's National newscast to 10 p.m. from 11 p.m.

CBC sources said Thursday that the Watson Report will return in September after production ends this spring but it will go off the air in January when the network's main newscast moves to its new time slot.

The last Ombudsman program will be televised April 13.

The network was expected to make an announcement on the reorganization later Thursday.

Several programs — such as Fifth Estate, Newsmagazine and the Medicine Show — have been rumored to be on the verge of cancellation but the CBC plans no more cuts for the moment, the sources said.

However, further cancellations could be announced later because the network's plans for the new news programming block at 10 p.m. are far from resolved, the sources added.

Ballet dancer gets grant

EDMONTON (CP) — A member of Vancouver's Pacific Ballet Theatre has been awarded a $3,000 grant by the Edmonton-based Clifford E. Lee Foundation.

Renald Rabu, artistic director and resident choreographer with the ballet, won the award for Sparks, an abstract and satirical work of the development of sparks to flame.

The award is given annually for a new work to be mounted and performed as part of the Banff Festival of the Arts dance presendation. It is granted in association with the Banff Centre School of Fine Arts.

This is the third consecutive year the award has gone to a Vancouver choreographer.

Dingbat Edith mourned

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Few of television's thousands of fictional characters have had the emotional impact on viewers as Edith Bunker, who will be killed off to enhance the future of CBS-TV's Archie Bunker's Place.

Edith's demise was actually hard news. The story that Archie Bunker's long-suffering wife was going to die was printed in newspapers and announced in the electronic media.

Jean Stapleton, who played Edith in All In The Family for nine years, was astonished at the stir she created a year ago when she announced she would not be returning to the show as a regular.

The news of her defection was broadcast and printed with solemnity.

Edith Bunker was a beloved figure of the 1970s, symbolic of a fading generation of women. She was the downtrodden but spirited wife of Archie Bunker, the chauvinist bigot whom she loved despite his shortcomings.

During nine Emmy-winning years viewers knew no matter what the crises — suspected infidelity, sickness, political strife, verbal abuse, bigotry — Archie and Edith would never violate their marriage vows.

With between 30 million and 60 million viewers a week, it is no wonder Edith's death is of great interest, if not concern, to an enormous segment of the American population.

The suggestion for her demise was made by costar Carroll O'Connor (Archie), who explained, "We have to move forward with the show. Archie Bunker's Place is doing well but we want to give it a strong new spine of family life.

"We have a middle-aged guy trying to raise this kid, Stephanie. His friends will be trying to pick a new mate for him which will make for a lot of fun. I can't see Archie remarrying but I can see a lot of people trying to fix him up.

"In the fall we will learn that Edith died during the interim. You can't go on with a leading character who never appears. Little Stephanie (Danielle Brisbois) and Archie will have it all behind them and will face the future."

O'Connor has a great deal to say about the situation comedy which is owned by Tandem, controlled by TV executive Alan Horn and, to an extent, CBS.

The show's creator, Norman Lear, was convinced by O'Connor that Edith's death would open up new avenues of comedy for Archie.

"The thought of Edith dead is like losing a very close relative," Lear said. "But dramatically it has become necessary for Carroll not to be circumscribed by an off-camera wife whose existence doesn't even allow him to be seen at home."

Ashes of fiddler's feud stirred by new musical

HALIFAX (CP) — The ashes of a feud which erupted in 1969 when the CBC announced it was cancelling the Don Messer show may stir to life again this fall when a Nova Scotia playwright opens a musical about the fiddler and the demise of his TV program.

Christopher Heide says the musical, Bring Back Don Messer, will focus on the controversy sparked by the CBC's decision in 1969 to cancel the late Maritime fiddler's popular weekly televison show after 11 years on the network.

The play, to be performed by the Mulgrave Road Co-op Theatre Company from Guysborough, N.S., is not completed but is expected to begin Sept. 7 and run to Oct. 30.

Messer, born in Tweedside, N.B., died in Halifax March 26, 1973, of a heart attack. He was 63.

The CBC announced it was canning the show, after once claiming it had a national audience of 2,750,000, to inject a fresh element into its winter program schedule.

Messer, who received word of the cancellation in a telegram, felt the manner it which he was informed was an insult.

The decision ignited instant protests from Messer fans.

The CBC was buried in protest mail.

Governor-General Ed Schreyer, then a member of Parliament, suggested in the Commons that since the Don Messer show was being dropped, it be included in the June festival opening that year at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa.

Messer's show moved to national television in 1958 after running several years on radio.

Messer and his Islanders began in 1934, with male vocalist and Messer's longtime friend, the late Charlie Chamberlain of Bathurst, N.B., and bass player Julius (Duke) Neilson of Woodstock, N.B. Clarinetist Rae Simmons of Amherst, N.S., joined the trio in 1940.

They were later joined by drummer Warren MacRae and guitarist Cecil McEachren, both of Charlottetown in 1942. The late Marg Osborne, a vocalist from Moncton, N.B., became the group's seventh member in 1946.

Boycott proposal voted down

LONDON (UPI) — Actress Vanessa Redgrave proposed a show business boycott of Israel at the British actors' union Equity. The motion was defeated by a narrow four votes.

Miss Redgrave, shouting to make herself heard over catcalls and heckling from 250 Equity members, said actors should not work in "racist" Israel in support of the rights of Palestinian artists.

Her motion also called for a ban on the sale of movies and television programs to Israel.

The boycott motion was defeated by 90 to 86.

COLORFUL CHARACTERS abounded in New York City's Easter Parade along famous Fifth Avenue. Thousands of people poured into a pedestrian mall to watch such sights as the gentleman in the Uncle Sam outfit and the bashful types in the oversize hats.

Critics laud Canadian's play

NEW YORK (UPI) — Canadian playwright David French's Of the Fields, Lately is "an agonizingly beautiful work" according to the New York Post which felt that it was worth seeing before another of his plays opens on Broadway in the fall.

Post critic Marilyn Stasio wrote that French was a "fascinating writer" and his Off Off Broadway play is a good indication of what to expect in his Jitters, which opens November 30.

Of the Fields, about a young man unable to overcome his antagonism for his father even when the latter has a heart attack, is currently playing at the Theater Off Park.

It was first performed in 1973 at Toronto's Tarragon Theatre, received rave reviews and subsequently won the Floyd Chalmers Drama Award.

A long, long weekend

Traffic was heavy Monday night as Easter weekend holidayers crowded on to B.C. Ferry Corp. vessels travelling between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

At least one fight broke out when a car tried to sneak into line at Swartz Bay where some had to wait up to four hours to cross.

The Tsawwassen terminal reported a three-sailing wait Monday evening and the ferry corporation put on an extra sailing to handle passengers left behind when the last ferry sailed at 10 p.m.

Swartz Bay and Departure Bay reported one-to two-sailing waits.

Only Horseshoe Bay at West Vancouver reported no waits for ferries bound for the island.

The system had been stretched almost to the snapping point last Thursday night due to the larger number of V.I.-bound travellers and added pressure from a strike by CP Rail ferry deckhands and oilers.

CP Rail normally moves about half the freight to the island.

Horseshoe Bay reported a 10-kilometre lineup of cars, trucks, buses and recreation vehicles. Traffic was light Sunday but started building Monday.

On Sunday, the Queen of Vancouver was delayed when it launched a boat to help three people whose pleasure craft had overturned about a kilometre south of Tsawwassen terminal.

Meanwhile, disgruntled commuters in Washington State face at least another day in the ferry strike that has left patrons of the largest ferry system in the U.S. seeking other ways to get across or around Puget Sound.

A court hearing is scheduled Wednesday in King County Superior Court to consider a contempt of court motion sought by the state against the Inlandboatman's Union.

State mediators are trying to get ferry workers and the state Department of Transportation back to bargaining in hopes of settling the strike that began Saturday.

On Monday, ferry patrons crammed into private charter boats, rode buses or drove their cars 110 kilometres around Puget Sound to get to work.

The ferry workers, who make between $17,000 and $23,000 a year, are seeking an increase of 11 per cent plus a cost-of-living clause in their next contract. The state has offered six per cent and said anything more would be inflationary.

Cowichan bus system promoted

NORTH COWICHAN — A plan for the first public transit system for the Cowichan Valley has been proposed by a committee of North Cowichan council.

Three routes were suggested, one from Chemainus to Duncan and the other two servicing outlying areas of Duncan.

The proposal was presented by Alan Hussey, chairman of the North Cowichan's transit committee who told council one of the features of the service would be its low cost.

Hussey proposed that school buses be used on the transit routes when they weren't required for school transportation.

Bring back grass: Braefoot neighbors

A group of Saanich residents wants the grass replanted in Braefoot Park.

The park at Braefoot and McKenzie was stripped of turf last year by the municipality and made into a sand-rubber sports field.

About 300 residents have signed petitions asking for the return of grass.

They say the new surface is ugly and spreads dust over the neighborhood.

Harold Todd, 1402 Andrews, says the new field looks like a parking lot.

And Thomas Harrap, 3987 Braefoot, calls it a dustbowl which is messing up his house.

Neighbors were shocked when the parks and recreation department told them the sand and rubber was the finished surface, according to Harrap.

He said the scheme is crazy and a waste of tax dollars — the field isn't suitable for soccer teams anymore because the combination of heavy sand and ground tires is like playing on a beach.

Lakehill Soccer Association has been forced to find other fields to play on, Harrap said.

The drainage problem has been solved, but the result is an ugly mess, he said.

Recreation director William Young wants to test the sand-rubber field for one year.

Additional sand and rubber to complete the playing surface should cost about $7,600, he said.

Nurses strike nearer

A strike by 2,700 government nurses cannot be avoided unless they are prepared to drop three bargaining ultimatums, the government's chief negotiator said today.

Mike Davison said that when negotiations with the Registered Nurses Association and the Psychiatric Nurses Association broke off last week "they left us with ultimatums on money, term of the contract and vacations."

The ultimatums mean negotiators for the Government Employee Relations Bureau have nowhere to go, he said.

The main issue in dispute is wages with the nurses seeking 34 per cent in a 27-month contract and the government offering 24 per cent over three years.

The 34 per cent hike compounded would mean 39 per cent over the 27 months and would raise the government nurses' monthly starting salary to $1,450 from $1,361, equal to what the 12,500 nurses employed by general hospitals will receive if they ratify a tentative contract giving them a 44-per-cent increase over 27 months.

Nurses spokesman Jerry Miller said the government nurses will maintain their traditional marginal wage difference over the hospital nurses because they will continue working an average 35-hour week compared with the general hospital nurses' 37½ hour week.

The government nurses, who have refused to say when they will go on strike, had not taken any strike action by noon today.

They have been in a legal position to strike since last Thursday.

In the Victoria area, Glendale Hospital, Tillicum Lodge and Oak Bay Manor could be affected by any strike action.

However, the nurses have not indicated whether they will conduct a total walkout or hit individual hospitals on a rotating basis.

Maths students winners

Two Vancouver Island schools did well among the 1,076 Canadian high schools which took part in the 18th annual junior mathematics contest sponsored by University of Waterloo and Mutual Life.

And two island students achieved honor roll standing among the 26,142 participants enrolled in Grades 9-11.

They are Allan Stokes of St. Michael's University School in Victoria, and Eleanor Jang, of Alberni District Senior Secondary.

The schools respectively ranked 40th and 38th in the top 50.

St. George's School in Vancouver was the second-place winner in team standings in which five leading students from each school are considered as a group.

Top team mark of 557.5 points was racked up by the University of Toronto School team while Alberni got 492 points and St. Michael's 490.25.

THREE BAKERIES

Excellent opportunities. Prime locations all. One is a Bakery/Cheese Shop/Delicatessen in a modern expanding plaza. Only $17,500. Another is a self-contained specialty bakery within strolling distance of Beacon Hill Park — with great tourist potential and virtually untapped wholesaling possibilities. The price has been reduced to $29,500 so hurry . . . The third is a large wholesale bakery serving the Greater Victoria area. $450,000.

FAMILY RESTAURANT

This is a 55 + seat, near-new restaurant with liquor licence. It is located in a rapidly growing area of Saanichton and would be an ideal opportunity for an owner-operator. Excellent lease and virtually new equipment for only $49,500.

INVESTORS DEVELOPERS

We have approximately 25,000 sq. ft. zoned C-1 and C-2 within the half-mile circle. It can be sold as business only, properties only or a combination of any of the above. This is a most lucrative opportunity for the astute investor — as holding or redevelopment. Call me without obligation for details on any of the above listings.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

309 IN MEMORIAM

LAMB — In loving memory of my dear husband Matthew Cornell, (Mac), passed to his eternal rest 8th April, 1977.
Three years have passed since that sad day
When one I loved was called away
God took him home, it was his will
But in my heart he liveth still.
—His loving Wife, Good night Dad. Barbara-Louise.

LAMB — Matthew C.
Passed away April 8, 1977. Sadly missed, always in our hearts. Babs and George.

Timely joke fools many

LONDON (AP) — BBC is still trying to apologize to overseas listeners who took seriously an April Fools Day broadcast that London's Big Ben was going digital.

And who were most fooled? The digital-crazy Japanese.

The tongue-in-cheek news item was so realistic that Japanese began sending in letters and messages furious that someone was meddling with what may well be the world's most famous clock.

The broadcast, heard throughout Japan and many other countries, sounded authentic because it included people's nostalgic anecdotes about the day Big Ben stopped and when it chimed 13 instead of 12.

Six-year-old hikes to safety

DARTMOOR (Reuter) — A six-year-old boy separated from his parents during an Easter picnic trekked 20 kilometres to safety across rivers and marshes in lonely moorland, police reported today. They said Tony Webster made the journey in four hours, arriving exhausted and cold but otherwise unharmed at a northern Dartmoor farm. Tony lost his parents as they picnicked on Dartmoor in southwestern England.

48 killed in bus crash

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A bus attempting to pass a truck on a narrow bridge went over the edge and crashed into a shallow ditch Monday, killing 48 persons and injuring 36 others. A police spokesman said the bus was en route to Mexico City from Tijuana when the accident occured near Culiacan, about 1,200 kilometres north of Mexico City. There were no foreigners aboard.

Carter twists arms as boycott backing wanes

Casualty toll mounts with downed copter

NEW DELHI (AP) — Radio Pakistan reported two more Soviet generals and three senior Afghan officers were killed last week when Moslem rebels downed a helicopter gunship in northeast Afghanistan.

The broadcast report said the Afghan officers were a division commander and two brigade commanders. It said the helicopter was shot down in Kunar province about 200 kilometres northeast of Kabul, and that reports from Afghanistan said the bodies were flown back to the Afghan capital.

The Pakistani government radio reported on Sunday that another Soviet general was killed last week in a rebel attack on the Bagram air base 70 km north of Kabul.

The report Monday also said an Afghan infantry commander was seriously wounded in a clash with Moslem rebels near Jalalabad, about 135 km east of Kabul, last Friday. It said 10 Afghan soldiers were killed but did not give rebel casualties.

By GLENN SOMERVILLE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The grim will that President Carter usually masks with a sunny smile shows plainly now in his determined efforts to punish the Soviet Union for its invasion of Afghanistan.

Facing growing reluctance from Olympic athletes who oppose the boycott of the Moscow games this summer and a backlash from Midwest farmers hurt by the Jan. 4 embargo on U.S. grain shipments to the Soviet Union, Carter has unleashed a campaign of cajolery and coercion to win support for his tough foreign policy stance.

Some of the administration's tactics are extremely heavy-handed.

After a call from a senior presidential adviser last week, for example Sears Roebuck and Co. announced it would cut off a $25,000 pledge to the U.S. Olympic Committee unless the committee agree not to send competitors to Moscow.

"Blatant blackmail," charged Don Miller, executive director of the Olympic committee. Lloyd Cutler, White House counsel who heads the boycott effort, officially denied any arm-twisting, then added the boycott is "critically necessary."

Last week, Carter ordered NBC not to make any more payments to the Soviet Union for television rights to the Moscow games and halted the sale of U.S. equipment to be used during the Olympics.

And that is only the beginning if resistance to the boycott continues, Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher warned a group of sports officials meeting here last week.

"We have not exhausted the measures we can take."

Behind this get-tough approach is an embarrassing truth for the Carter administration. The more time that passes, the fewer Americans feel keeping amateur athletes at home will force the Soviet Union to pull its troops out of Afghan territory they have occupied since last December.

Ronald Reagan, emerging as the Republican party's presidential nominee for next November, regularly draws cheers from crowds by criticizing the Carter administration's boycott of the Moscow games and suggesting the athletes make the final decision.

The administration is trying to convince Americans that national security will be threatened by participating in the Moscow games. Defence Secretary Harold Brown says sending an American team would be "putting the stamp of approval on Soviet actions in Afghanistan."

As Carter struggles to get public acceptance of this view, he is simultaneously faced by a revolt of farmers and by agricultural industries that once loyally supported his anti-Soviet embargo of grain shipments.

The president said Jan. 4 that "for urgent reasons of national security and foreign policy" the Soviet Union was being denied all but eight million tons of the 25 million tons of U.S. grain it planned to buy up until next Sept. 30. But grain farmers say the administration has failed to keep its promises to cushion them from falling prices for the surplus grain.

Last week, corn was selling on Midwest markets about 20 cents a bushel lower than the $2.40 U.S.-a-bushel price it fetched in January. Wheat was down around 35 cents from $3.87 a bushel in January.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest U.S. farm organization, has withdrawn its support for the boycott. The agriculture department admits to "miscalculations," but insists high interest rates and transportation problems also are affecting prices.

Recently, however, Minnesota's commissioner for agriculture, Mark Seetin, challenged this federal claim, and said allies including Canada are benefitting from boycott that ties up U.S. farmers.

MODERN HANNIBAL: Only Marco Broggi, a 40-year-old Swiss, used a motorized hang glider instead of an elephant caravan to cross the Alps. Claiming a first, during which he fought strong winds and nursed a faltering 15-horsepower engine, Broggi gives thumbs-up after piloting his 70-pound machine from Altdorf in central Switzerland over the 2,122-metre Gotthard pass to Ambripiotta in the south of the country in 135 minutes to gain his place in the record books.

Pope-has-mono report criticized

ROME (UPI) — An Italian magazine said today Pope John Paul II has suffered from severe mononucleosis for 22 years and requires frequent blood transfusions. The Vatican denied the report, calling it "sensationalism."

The copyright article in the weekly magazine L'Europeo was the second report in the Italian press in four days saying the pope was suffering from a serious blood disease.

The Vatican also denied a report in the newspaper La Repubblica Saturday saying the pope may be suffering from leukemia.

In denying the six-page L'Europeo article, Vatican deputy spokesman Don Pierfranco Pastore said Vatican officials were constantly amazed by reports on papal health appearing in the news.

"I am authorized to tell you that the article appearing today in an illustrated Italian weekly about the health of the pope was seen here with stupor," Pastore said. "It insinuates information that we have on more than one occasion denied."

"We are constantly amazed by this search for sensationalism at all costs that seems to guide the pens of professional journalists," he said.

L'Europeo said the former Polish Cardinal Karol Wojtyla contracted mononucleosis in 1958 shortly after being named auxiliary Roman Catholic bishop of Krakow and has been under intense medical care for the disease ever since.

It said part of the pope's medical care for the illness calls for intense physical exercise, especially swimming, and that the swimming pool installed in the papal villa at Castel Gandolfo, south of Rome, was built for that purpose.

"His stays at Castel Gandolfo are therapeutic and not for sport," the magazine said.

Chutists die in crash

STOCKHOLM (AP) — A light plane carrying six sport parachutists went into an uncontrolled spin Sunday and crashed, Swedish officials said.

Three parachutists managed to get out of the plane and open their chutes, landing safety, but three others and the pilot perished when the plane slammed into the ground before almost 200 horrified onlookers.

Terrorist raid nets secret data

PARIS (AP) — Direct Action, a French terrorist group, claimed responsibility today for a sabotage attack on a computer firm from which it said it had obtained secret defence and intelligence data.

In a statement to a news agency in Paris, the group said the information taken from a computer in the office of Philips Informatique in the southwestern city of Toulouse last weekend was destined for the national defence forces and the country's intelligence agency. The group said the information would be made public soon.

The group said the operation proved it still could function despite the March 27-28 arrests of 22 suspected terrorists. Eight persons later were released.

Four of those detained are believed to be members of the Italian Red Brigades, wanted for questioning in the 1978 kidnapping and slaying of former Italian premier Aldo Moro, and are being held in a prison in the Paris area.

Picking a date to sow seeds

It would be a great help to the home gardener if we would set a definite date for seed sowing outdoors when everything would be in their favor for fast germination and rapid growth of the seedlings.

Here on the west coast we have a tentative date of May 24, which seems to be the accepted date across Canada, although a warm holiday has been followed by a killing frost on May 31 and June 1.

Even July 1 has brought a severe frost at dawn which damaged tomatoes and other vegetables, while a heavy hail storm another year tore the foliage from plants in gardens, nurseries, and garden shop displays. These are extremes which were not expected.

It is impossible to predict the day to day weather in advance for gardens in a given locality, and we already hear of gardens near salt water and on high ground where well drained soil is workable and warm enough for sowing, while low lying gardens still experience frost and cold wet soil.

The old-time estate gardeners found a way estimating an early or late spring season by noting the date of Easter Sunday, and many commercial growers follow the reasoning today.

Easter is a moveable religious feast based on the moon. It is always the first Sunday following a full moon which comes after March 21, the spring equinox. The full moon this year was Monday, March 31, hence Easter Sunday was April 6.

During this century the earliest date for Easter was March 23 in 1913, and the latest April 25 in 1943, a difference of 33 days. This year it is 2 weeks past the earliest date and almost 3 weeks ahead of the latest date.

Based on past experience this would indicate the high temperatures of the past week could be followed by cooler temperatures and rain over the next one or two moon changes.

Looking into a borrowed copy of the Old Farmer's Almanac the prediction for the weather in the Pacific northwest is:- "A mild March will be followed by a cloudier and wetter-than-usual April, but May will be sunny and warm." Maybe the Almanac writers base their prediction on the date of Easter.

All our garden plants fit into one of three categories, those able to withstand two to three degrees of light frost, those which are damaged by a night temperature around one degree above zero, and those with seeds that will not germinate until the soil temperature has reached 8 degrees C.

The hardy vegetables have already been sown and are coming along well with slight protection on frosty nights.

The annuals and vegetables in the second group will not be sown or planted out for at least another two weeks. The warm soil seeds in group three will be held until around mid-May unless there is a definite warming trend by the end of April.

It is always wise to make a few small experimental sowings, to test the micro-climate of the garden. They give the gardener a better idea of what can, or cannot, be done in the particular area where the garden is located.

Should these test sowings fail there is no great waste of time or seed. Should they succeed they provide much valuable information on the chances of having early crops.

A home vegetable garden should never be completely sown and planted on one day. Small sowings every 10 to 15 days provide the needs of a family for a few weeks and the crops can be used at their prime. Losses are small if weather or soil conditions are not suitable.

It is well known that the gardener who delays sowings and plantings for a couple of weeks for better conditions is always ahead of the one who makes early sowings which suffer a set-back.

Peru seeks aid for refugees

LIMA (AP) — The Peruvian government turned to its Latin-American allies in the Andean Pact for help in finding asylum for the estimated 10,000 Cubans jamming its embassy in Havana in a desperate attempt to get out of Cuba.

The United States said it would take some of them if the Peruvian government would let the refugees come to Lima. But so far the Peruvians were admitting none of them because they have no definite assurances from other countries that they would take them.

"Peru cannot take charge of 10,000 refugees, no country can do that individually," said Foreign Minister Arturo Garcia.

Garcia and the foreign ministers of the other four Andean Pact states — Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela — scheduled an emergency meeting in the Peruvian capital Wednesday to review the situation and discuss what might be done.

Meanwhile, in Miami, thousands of Cuban exiles chanting "Thanks Peru" and waving flags joined impromptu parades and rallies throughout the city in a day-long outpouring of support for their 10,000 countrymen seeking asylum at the Peruvian Embassy in Havana.

"We're going to keep marching until Cuba is free, until the people at the Peruvian Embassy are free," vowed Pedro Gomez. "What you see here is the beginning of a new revolution."

The U.S. state department said it would consider applications for admission to the United States from those Cubans who could reach the Peruvian capital.

Havana Radio described the throng that descended on the Peruvian Embassy last weekend as "vagrants and bums" and said they are welcome to leave the country.

"If the government of Peru wishes to receive in their country all the anti-socials and bums, we will be glad to authorize them to leave our country and also those who are ideologically in disagreement with the revolution and socialism," said the broadcast.

Peru's foreign minister said the five members of the embassy staff are not able to cope with the crowd jamming the suburban estate and asked the International Red Cross to provide food.

The crowd poured into the 20-acre embassy compound after the Cuban police guard was withdrawn because a policeman was killed when six Cubans seeking asylum crashed a bus into the compound gate. Eighteen other Cubans have been inside the embassy since Jan. 1 trying to leave the country, and 16 Cubans have been at the Venezuelan Embassy for months.

Castro's government on Saturday said the 24 could not leave the country because they were criminals, but the rest could go. It restored the police guard on Monday, sealing off the surrounding six blocks. Radio Havana said the government will provide medicine and sanitation facilities and is trying to reduce the size of the crowd.

The Cuban youth newspaper Juventud Rebelde said the government has told 2,470 people they could return to their homes and apply for exit visas. Havana Radio said 1,730 have been given passes to go home and return to the embassy later.

Peruvian officials insisted there are 10,000 people in the compound, but one foreign diplomat in Havana put the number at 7,000.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, a spokesman for the immigration department said today that Cubans packed into the Peruvian Embassy in Havana have not approached Canadian officials about obtaining visas to come to Canada.

The spokesman also said that because the 10,000 or so Cubans are on the grounds of the Peruvian Embassy, "it's only Peru that can get them out."

"We view the situation as between Peru and Cuba," the immigration spokesman said.

Canada does not have an immigration office in Cuba.

Sadat, Carter hold talks on Palestinian problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vowing to put the Palestinian problem "on the road to a just settlement," Egyptian President Anwar Sadat opened talks today with U.S. President Carter on how much self-rule Arabs are to have in Israeli-held territory.

Passing up formal arrival ceremonies, the two leaders posed quietly for photographs in the White House rose garden before entering the Oval Office. They made no statements.

Guarantees for Israel's security were the likely focus of the White House sessions today. At the same time, the Egyptian leader was expected to push for creation of a Palestinian legislative council and a rollback of Israeli forces on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

As a gesture to Israel, which is concerned that this might lead to a Palestinian state threatening its existence, Egyptian sources indicated Sadat will suggest demilitarization of the territories for five years and either a neutral peacekeeping unit or a mixed Egyptian-Israeli patrol.

Whatever is agreed to by Carter and Sadat over two days will be submitted to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin when he calls at the White House next week. Then, if there is agreement, the Egyptian and Israeli negotiating teams will try to translate the principles into a settlement by the May 26 target date.

If key issues remain unresolved, however, U.S. and Egyptian officials said Carter might hold a three-way summit meeting with Sadat and Begin.

$1M fine slapped on N.Y. transit union

NEW YORK (UPI) — The transit workers' union today was fined $1 million on contempt charges for calling the bus and subway strike that has shut down the city's mass transit system for eight days but its leaders were spared jail terms.

Justice John Monteleone said in the state Supreme Court in Brooklyn that he would impose additional and harsher penalties if the leadership of the Transport Workers Union and Amalgamated Transit Union did not order union members back to work immediately.

Union leaders called the fines "unusually harsh," but said they would not order the men back

Local 100 of the transport workers' union was fined $500,000 and its parent union $250,000. The amalgamated transit union International was fined $200,000 and its two striking locals $25,000 each.

The amalgamated transit union locals represent 2,500 bus drivers and maintenance workers in Brooklyn and Staten Island. The workers in the other union are on bus and subways throughout the city.

The judge said he was not imposing jail sentences on the union leaders at the recommendation of city and state authorities. But John Lawe, president of Local 100 of the transit workers' union, and six other members of two unions were fined the maximum of $250.

Meanwhile, Koch urged his the walking and biking commuters to to keep going, "as painful as it is."

"People are withstanding pain and suffering, but it'd be terrible to throw in the towel when we have established that the city will survive," Koch said at a morning news conference.

Rush-hour traffic was lighter today than on Monday and officials speculated many people stayed home because of the rain and fog.

With the strike entering its second week, tempers began to flare.

"You're starting to hear horn-blowing again — you didn't hear that last week," said police officer Anthony Cichon, as he directed traffic at 42nd Street and Ninth Avenue in Manhattan.

"People are starting to get worn out. The first few days were a novelty. Now it's a chore."

attempted to ridicule Madeleine Ryan. Payette told a meeting that Ryan was the type of man she detested and that furthermore, he was married to an "Yvette."

Guy and Yvette are the Dick and Jane of a certain type of Quebec primer for children which stereotypes roles for the sexes. Yvette is the docile submissive little girl learning to become a housewife while Guy gets the role of the dominant sex at home and in society.

Payette later apologized in the national assembly, saying she had not intended to cause pain to anyone in particular. But it was too late.

Angered and insulted Liberal women organized a "Brunch for Yvettes" at a Quebec City hotel last weekend and nearly 2,000 women showed up. They heard speeches from several of the women who also spoke last night, including Madeleine Ryan herself, who far from being an Yvette, is an impressive public performer. She has long played active roles in social, educational and religious affairs as well as being a wife to Claude Ryan and bringing up their five children.

The success of the Quebec City brunch showed Quebec Liberal organizers and the No Committee for the Referendum that they had a new and powerful issue. They immediately began organizing a similar meeting for Montreal, gladly identifying supporting women as Yvettes, to keep the Payette insult fresh in the public mind.

The response from the Montreal area, was so great that the event, originally planned for a Montreal hotel, had to be transferred to the Forum.

The federalist forces already had a strong women's organization, called Les Quebecoise pour le Non, or Quebec Women voting No. But Lise Payette's gibe has given them a new impetus and the catchy "Yvette" symbol has already become part of the Quebec political vocabulary.

The "femmes federalistes" have been able to unite and contest Payette's attitude towards certain kind of women, who happen to be rather numerous. They have also been able to unite against Payette's suggestion that there is some kind of link between the liberation of women and the liberation of Quebec.

Last night's impressive show of strength by the "Yvettes" of Quebec, an all-women effort, is the biggest boost the No side in the referendum has had in a long time. The general feeling here is that support has been growing for a yes vote to give the PQ government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association.

New chief at ICBC

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. has a new man in charge.

J.C. Gilmer, retired president of CP Air today was appointed chairman of the board of ICBC.

He replaces Ralph Gillen who resigned at the end of February to take up full-time duties with the Canadian Commercial Corporation.

Gilmer has been a member of the ICBC board since November, 1978.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, responsible for the insuyrance corporation, also announced the appointment of two new directors.

Walter Dyck is senior partner in the chartered accountant firm of Campbell, Sharpe.

Lawrence Eberhardt, now retired from active business was for many years a senior officer in the Jim Pattison organization.

'Ill break your legs' gov't collector says

TORONTO (CP) — A man who phoned the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission to ask how long he had to pay back a $62 unemployment insurance overpayment was shocked to hear: "Pay it back by 4 p.m. or I'll break your legs."

The caller, amazed by the answer, phoned again a few minutes later only to be told the collection officer was too busy to take the call because he was "breaking someone else's arms."

Eventually the debtor went to the collection office and asked to see the officer "who broke clients' legs." In the argument that followed the commission official asked the caller if he wanted to "go out feet first."

Finally feeling threatened, the caller left to get help. He returned with his brother, a fireman for the municipality of Hampstead, a suburb of Montreal. A scuffle ensued between the fireman and the collection officer who works in the Montreal area.

What had started as a joke — the collection officer throught he recognized the caller's voice as that of an old friend — ended with a 15-day suspension for the official. The suspension was appealed by the collection officer to the Public Service Staff Relations Board but an adjudicator recently upheld the suspension.

Adjudicator Emile Moalli said it was difficult to understand why the collection officer did not immediately telephone the debtor when he realized his mistake in identifying him. Moalli also said the second commission employee who participated in the extended joke by saying the first officer was busy breaking someone's arms should not be complimented for taking part.

The $62 insurance overpayment has been re-paid.

Khomeini fans Iraq uprising

Times News Services

Ayatollah Khomeini, fuelling fires that threatened to break into open war, urged Iraq's army today to "join the people" and overthrow the regime of President Saddam Hussein.

At the same time, the English language newspaper Arab Times in Kuwait said the entire Gulf region had gone into a state of alert because of speculation the United States might bomb oil fields in southern Iran.

Iran charged that Iraq, at the prompting of the United States, had attacked an Iranian oil facility and a police headquarters near the border with Iraq.

Iran's official Pars news agency said about 70 Iraqi commandos with mortars and rocket-propelled grenades launched the attack before dawn Monday in Kermanshah Province in wester Iran. No casualties were reported, but Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar said the attack cut the flow of oil from the Kermanshah refinery, a major installation.

Iran's official radio also said that "aggressors" had occupied Iranian territory in another portion of the border region but were repulsed by Revolutiolnary Guards. One Revolutionary Guard was killed and 11 wounded, the radio said.

Tehran Radio's Arabic reports today quoted Iranian newspapers as saying Iraq had mobilized 20,000 soldiers along the troubled border with Iran and that Baghdad had expelled at least 15,000 Iranians from Iraq.

The new flurry followed Iranian charges Monday that Iraqi troops, supported by artillery, had crossed the border into Iran. The Iranians claimed the Iraqis had been driven back.

Khomeini, in a nationwide radio broadcast monitored in Kuwait, urged the Iraqi people to "wake up and topple this corrupt regime in your Islamic country before it destroys you."

"All tribes of the Euphrates and Tigris (rivers) should wake up and unite with all Iraqi people to uproot corruption before it is too late, and defend Islam," he said.

Khomeini called on Iraq's army, rated the strongest in the Middle East outside Israel, "not to obey the orders of the foes of the Koran and Islam, but join the people."

Khomeini said Hussein's regime was guilty of collaborating with the United States, which broke off diplomatic relations with Iran on Monday.

The latest U.S. moves brought fears of an American military attack on Iran, although the Arab Times added, "There was no independent confirmation of these reports."

The Kuwaiti news agency KUNA, said both Iran and Iraq had placed their armies on full alert. Other Arabic newspapers said Algeria was trying to mediate the conflict between the two countries.

Reports from Tehran said 70 Iraqi saboteurs attacked oil installations in the western city of Naft-e-Shah — the second assault in two days.

Five years for cultist

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — One of two persons charged in the Peoples Temple tragedy was sentenced today to five years hard labor for the attempted murder of a nine-year-old girl.

Charles Edward Beikman, 44, a cook and shoemaker for the Jonestown community, had pleaded guilty to that charge, but innocent of slaying a top cult member and her three children on Nov. 18, 1978.

Court sources said the state is not expected to pursue charges that Beikman murdered Sharon Amos, an aide to cult leader Jim Jones and public relations officer for the Peoples Temple.

On the same night that Mrs. Amos and three of her children died in Georgetown, their throats slashed ear-to-ear, Jones led more than 900 of his followers to their deaths in a mass murder-suicide in Jonestown, about 240 kilometres northwest of this South American capital.

The mass killings followed the slaying by cult members of U.S. congressman Leo Ryan of Caifornia, three journalists and a defecting cult member on a jungle airstrip near Jonestown.

Another cult member, Larry Layton, 33, a former marine, is charged with the murder of Ryan and the others. His trial has been delayed until May 5.

Beikman had pleaded guilty to the attempted murder of Stephanie Jones, no relation to the cult leader, who was in a bathroom of the house where the Amos family died.

Good luck if Quebec votes yes

MONTREAL (CP) — Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney warned Quebecers today that many Canadians would simply say "goodbye and good luck" if the province votes for sovereignty-association.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque "is dead wrong" when he says a yes vote in the referendum will bring the other provinces to the negotiating table, said Blakeney.

"There are many in Western Canada who view with comparative equanimity the splitting of the Quebec-Ontario power centre, with whom they have been battling for close to a century," Blakeney told a businessmen's luncheon.

to make an inventory of Iranian assets in the U.S., frozen by a previous order, to "aid in designing a program against Iran for the hostages, for the hostages families and other U.S. claimants" to file for damages.

Besides the 50 hostages in the embassy, three other American officials are under virtual house arrest at the Iranian Foreign Ministry, where they sought sanctuary when the militants stormed the embassy Nov. 4.

With FBI agents shadowing Iranian diplomats to make sure they leave the U.S., Carter's toughened stance against Iran is drawing cautious reaction from the families of the U.S. hostages — and some surprisingly strong support from Congress.

"It's about time we tried to get their attention some way," said Robert Hohman, father of Sgt. Donald Hohman of West Sacramento, Calif. "The president is right. He has to do it."

There was a similar and bipartisan reaction from the Senate.

Senator George McGovern, the anti-war Democratic presidential candidate of 1972 and a frequent critic of the Carter administration, said Carter should be planning for a naval blockade or even selective air strikes if the hostages aren't released.

However, some of the men trying to replace Carter in the White House next year were less than supportive of his moves, but they offered no specific alternatives.

Play begins

Some 1,400 contract bridge players from six provinces and from 14 states as far away as Florida and Texas opened a six-day American Contract Bridge League tournament at The Empress today.

A cordinator said the players are in the tournament to enjoy themselves, to win and to accumulate points.

Camosun facade shaky

Chunks of masonry are in danger of falling from the facade of Camosun College's historic Young building, architect John Wade has warned.

A letter from Wade outlining the danger will be brought before Camosun College council Thursday.

The letter points out the potential dangers, injuries and claims the college could face if pieces of the old structure come down.

Vancouver

Prices were down in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11:00 a.m. PST was 1,968,107 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 101 advanced, 144 declined and 169 remained unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, dropping .05 to $6.80 on 43,680 shares and Hal Roach Studios remained steady at $2.25 on 2,400. Keg Restaurants declined .14 to $1.66 on 2,300

New York

Stock prices edged up in quiet trading today, halting the plunge that took place Monday amid fears of a recession and new Mideast tensions.

Fears of recession and growing Mideast problems had contributed to the slide Monday, but there was little news to affect the market and it settled into a nervous pattern.

Oil stocks rebounded from the previous day's slides and were generally up. Mobil gained 2 to $64 and Getty rose 1¼ to $72¼. But Atlantic Richfield fell ¾ to $83 and Exxon dropped ⅝ to $54⅞.

Pan American World Airways, which gained Civil Aeronautics Board approval to continue flying the Miami-London route, rose ¼ to 4¼.

Seagram gained another 2¾ to $56. Sun Co. on Monday offered $2.3 billion for Seagram's U.S. oil and gas properties.

London

The London stock market was mixed near the close of quiet trading today.

The Financial Times index fell 6.4 to 426.2.

Industrials, banks and oils eased.

Golds firmed and Canadian stocks were lower.

Husky to increase refinery production

CALGARY (CP) — Husky Oil Ltd. has approved an increase in the capacity of the company's Lloydminster heavy oil refinery from 12,000 barrels a day to 25,000 barrels a day, the company has announced.

Husky said the production increase, planned for completion in the second half of 1982, will cost an estimated $55 million.

The company said the expansion will provide an additional market in Canada for western Canadian heavy crude oil and will increase asphalt supply in areas which have experienced shortages in recent years.

Husky said some road-building and construction projects were restricted in western Canada in 1979 due to a limited availability of asphalt.

In a related development, Husky has also applied to the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board for a permit to construct a crude oil pipeline from Cold Lake, Alta., to Lloydminster.

$5M plant

EDMONTON (CP) — Sulmar Canada Ltd. and Procor Ltd. have announced plans for a $5-million sulphur granulating plant near Fort McMurray.

Duncan McRae, sales engineer with Procor, said the company is waiting for provincial government approval but expects to start construction early next month.

The plant will have an initial capacity of 280,000 tonnes of sulphur a year. The sulphur will be trucked from the Syncrude Canada Ltd. and Suncor Ltd. oil sands plants, processed at the Lynton siding south of Fort McMurray and transported to markets on the Northern Alberta Railway.

McRae said that in addition to sulphur processing the project will require steam generating, rail-car loading, liquid sulphur storage, formed sulphur storage, truck turn-around and other facilities.

Canada racks up $312M auto deficit

TORONTO (CP) — Canada had a $312.5-million deficit in automotive trade with the U.S. in the first two months of this year, the Automotive Parts Manufacturers Association of Canada has reported.

That was a slight drop from the $330.4-million deficit reported for the similar 1979 period, reflecting a drop in both imports and exports so far this year.

Exports for the period this year totalled $1.5 billion, down from $2.1 billion in the similar 1979 period. Shipments of motor vehicles to the U.S. dropped to $976.1 million compared with $1.3 billion in 1979, reflecting falling demand in the U.S. for large cars which make up the bulk of Canadian vehicle production.

Imports totalled $1.8 billion, down from $2.4 billion in 1979. Vehicle imports totalled $689.1 million, compared with $767.5 million a year ago.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 325 cattle and calves consisting of a light supply of average condition slaughter steers and cows.

There were no slaughter heifers on offer. Slaughter steers met a dull local demand with continuing downward pressure with prices $2 lower. Slaughter cows showed a firmer trend with prices $1 higher. Too few bulls sold to quote.

A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. $66.50-$68; B-C 63-66. D1-2 cows 51-53; D3-5 46-51.
